MOTORCYCLIST SERIOUSLY INJURED

INVESTIGATE WRECK TO FIX BLAME: EIGHT DEAD

Three Injured Victims May Die and Increase Toll—Lehigh Road Throws Blame On Jersey Line

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 28.—An investigation was to be opened here today by F. Bohney, chief of the accident division of the state public service commission to fix the blame for the wreck of the Jersey Railroad's Scranton flyer and Lehigh Limited in which eight persons were killed and about forty injured. Three of the injured persons, one an eleven year old girl, Ann Valventage, of Broadbrook, Mass., were in a serious condition in St. Lukes Hospital. The others were Dr. M. S. Kleckner, of Allentown, Pa. ,and Mrs. Elizabeth Mitchan, of Toronto, Ont.

Lehigh officials issued a statement last night in which they said the signals were set against the engineer of the train of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

DEMOCRATIC SEERS WEAR WORRIED LOOK OVER M'ADOO ATTACK

Fear Issues Which Split Party in 1924 May Be Revived

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—With one eye on New York and the other on California, Democratic seers here today wore a worried look over recent developments forecasting resumption of the harrowing Smith-McAdoo, wet-dry and Klan-Anti-Klan feud.

Not a Democratic leader in town could be found to comment today for publication upon the statement of William G. McAdoo that Gov. Al Smith's Democracy in New York and Governor Ritchie's in Maryland are attempting nullification of the constitution in their fight for what they call state rights.

Privately, however, the view was expressed that this first national political statement from McAdoo since he and Smith locked horns in Madison Square Garden in 1924 was notice that he was still in the political arena.

It confirmed the opinion aroused when candidates were tagged with the McAdoo label in the California primary and when McAdoo men made a stand in the Democratic California convention.

Up to that time there had been little mention of the faction and McAdoo took no ostensible part in the politics of the party.

Even then politicians here felt that McAdoo was making no open bid to resume leadership of the faction in the party. But the public speech against Smith and Ritchie delivered before the Los Angeles Women's Christian Temperance Union left no other interpretation.

Coincidentally the Smith group is staging a state convention at Syracuse which has impressed Democrats here as being a Smith rally. The state platform adopted by the convention will be scrutinized by National Democrats who will seek in it a statement of the platform upon which they expect Smith to make a bid for the presidential nomination in 1928.

Indications are that both sides in the old Klan fight are gathering strength for any storm that is to develop. Although McAdoo has been out of the picture personally until the last few days, the southern delegations which gave him strength in the last convention have been carrying on the fight for policies he represented. The "Smith" issue was raised in several Southern Democratic primaries.

TRUDIE VISITING IN OHIO CAPITAL

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English channel, will be Columbus' guest today.

Miss Ederle will arrive this afternoon at 3 o'clock and will be met by a committee headed by Mayor James J. Thomas and representatives of civic and commercial organizations.

She will lead a parade, escorted by a band and a squadron of police from Union Station to the Neil House.

The swimming star will appear personally at 8:30 tonight in Memorial Hall at the Radio show and will broadcast from WAIU studio on Memorial stage at 9:15 eastern standard time.

In addition she will appear twice Wednesday afternoon and twice Wednesday night at the Radio show.

DAMAGES REFUSED

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Alighting from a street car between intersections lost a damage suit for Miss Thelma M. McDermott in common pleas court here.

The Red Top Company who had been sued for $15,170 damages was absolved from blame by a jury after forty minutes deliberation. The street car company had been held blameless.

Ho, Another!

Norman Leslie Derham swam the English Channel in thirteen hours and fifty-five minutes, winning the $5,000 prize offered to the first Briton to lower Gertrude Ederle's mark.

THREE CASES FACE SUPREME COURT AS MEETS ON TUESDAY

Appeal In Damage Suit First Case Facing Judges

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Three cases were scheduled for hearing as the Ohio supreme court reconvened today for the fall term after having been in recess since July 9.

Cases pending in the court included 107 general document cases and 160 motion cases.

The first case scheduled to be heard at this term is the appeal of William J. Bowman of Cincinnati in his $50,000 damage suit against William Lemon. Bowman sued to recover for injuries received when assaulted and beaten by two men whom he alleged were hired by Lemon.

The appeal of David Atkins, negro convicted of killing Harry A. Malone, railroad detective near Justus, in August, 1925 is on the calandar the first day. Atkins claimed self-defense but was sentenced to be electrocuted.

The third suit is a mandamus brought by Jacob Zettler, Jr., of Columbus, to compel the state tax commission to assess property owned by Fraternal organizations and money and bonds owned by financial institutions.

MELLON HAS FAITH IN PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon believes prohibition is slowly but surely decreasing liquor consumption in the U. S.

Mellon said today bootleg sources of supply are decreasing and that the people are drinking less than ever before. He declared rum smuggling by sea has been virtually stopped ,adding that very little liquor is now coming across the Canadian border,.

Industrial alcohol, he admitted, continues to be the chief source of supply for illicit markets.

FACTORY DAMAGED

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28—Damage estimated at $50,000 was caused today by a fire which damaged the Day Wood-Heel Co., plant here.

The fire originated in the boiler room.

TAKE THREE DAYS TO REACH MINERS

ENTOMBED MEN MUST WAIT WHILE RESCUE CREWS BORE SHAFTS

Tapping Indicates Trapped Men Are Still Alive

IRONWOOD, Mich, Sept. 28. — The entombed miners who since last Friday have been trapped in the Pabst mine here must wait three days at least before rescuers are able to reach their level, half a mile below the surface, it was announced here today. Unless unexpected means of access to the miners are discovered, it will take three solid days of digging to get to the miners level it was said at rescue headquarters.

Belief that the miners are still alive was voiced when Alfred Moki, a rescue worker wormed his way 150 feet down the shaft and with a rope tied to his waist wriggled past the shaft supports and boulders until he could tap an iron pipe leading to the eighth level of the mine where the men are believed gathered.

He tapped on the pipe and was answered by a success of eight taps. Rescue leaders interpreted this to mean that the men are on the eighth level. He said he could hear faint sound of the men and believed they were digging.

It was believed early today that the miners have plenty of light for a mine foreman recalled that he had left a five gallon can of kerosene on the eighth level just before the cave in.

Four plans of rescue are being worked on:

Workers are digging and blasting through the main shaft while another crew has obtained access to the 13th level through adjoining shafts and are tunneling upward. Another group is drilling a three inch hole to the eighth level through which they hope to communicate with the miners, they also hope to pass food tablets down this tube to the trapped men. The fourth group is clearing up the cave in at the 21st level.

Rescue work is proceeding slowly because the shafts of the mine must be walled up after each excavation to prevent another cave in.

The group in the 13th level estimated that they were less than 300 feet from the prisoners this morning.

Mine officials report that although the prisoners are naturally undergoing hardships, their prison is spacious enough to hold all of them without discomfort, that there are plenty of air pockets handy and that water undoubtedly seeps through to allay their thirst.

MERTON RE-CALLED AS CHIEF WITNESS IN DAUGHERTY CASE

German To Testify This Time As Defense Witness

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Richard Merton of Frankfort, Germany came back as the chief witness in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial today.

He was called as the first witness for the defense after the state had completed its case against former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

Col. William Rand of the defense questioned Merton as to conversations Merton had with R. E. Williams, assistant to Miller before he applied for return of $7,000,000-000 assets of the American Metal Company. Merton maintained that while Williams gave him worthwhile information he "used my own judgment."

QUIZZ EVANGELIST IN CONSPIRACY SOON

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—Hearing of the charges of conspiracy to defeat justice against Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist and four associates, was expected to produce further sensations here today as District Attorney Keyes led up to the examination of his star witness.

The prosecution seeks to establish that the evangelist's story of abduction into Mexico last May was a fabrication and that she was with Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple, the seat of her cult, at Carmel-By-The-Sea.

Tinneys Are at It Again

Mrs. Frank Tinney obtained a court order for the arrest of her actor-mate for non-payment of $1,400 back alimony.

MAGISTRATE WAS STRONG FOR LAW

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The stringent Sullivan law designed to keep crooks in this state from possessing firearms, worked to the disadvantage of Aurelio Baldes, an artist when he tried to be a good citizen. He bought a second hand bureau and found a pistol in one of the drawers when it was delivered. He took the pistol to the police station and turned it in. He was promptly arrested for having a revolver.

"I only wanted to be a dutiful citizen," he told Magistrate Glatzmayer in night court last night.

"Sorry, but I'll have to hold you in bail of $25," the magistrate said.

Baldes, being an artist, didn't have $25. The magistrate having done his duty, supplied the bail from his own pocket and Baldes was released.

BELIEVE BODIES OF TWO WASHED AWAY

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 28—River men today believed that flood waters in the Ohio had washed down stream, the bodies of Abraham Weisenthal, wealthy furniture dealer and Mrs. May Stroup, drowned yesterday when the speed boat in which they were riding capsized.

BACK FROM TRIP

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Charles V. Truax, state director of agriculture has returned from a corn borer inspection through Northern Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Canada and expressed alarm concerning the pest. State and federal efforts will be redoubled he said.

WOMAN KILLED

LISBON, O., Sept. 28—Mrs. Charles Heston, 65, of Painesville, was killed and her husband and small grand daughter were painfully injured when their auto overturned near here. The steering wheel broke and the auto upset near the foot of a hill, pinning Mrs. Heston underneath.

FAULKNER FUND HAS PASSED $10,000

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—The James W. Faulkner education memorial will be organized formally by Ohio newspapermen at a meeting here Tuesday, October 5. The fund commemorates the life and public service of the late James W. Faulkner, who was political writer on the Cincinnati Enquirer for more than thirty years.

The fund is said by authorities to be the first in the world established to be a permanent memorial for an active newspaper reporter. Planned shortly after his death three years ago, it opened with a goal set at $10,000. More than that sum has been subscribed and now is waiting action by the organization. The finance committee still is receiving contribution it was announced today by A. E. McKee, associate editor of the Ohio State Journal.

The plan is to use the income from the fund in aiding students complete their education, giving preference to those who plan to enter the newspaper field.

BODIES OF OHIO RIVER VICTIMS RECOVERED FAR DOWN STREAM

Victims Taken From Water At Point Pleasant, W. Va.—Lost Their Lives When Skiff Capsized

POMEROY, O., Sept. 28.—Recovery of the bodies of two of five persons drowned in the Ohio River at Mason City, W. Va., across the river from here was made at Point Pleasant, W. Va., sixteen miles down stream.

One was identified as Mrs. A. C. Foulk and the other body was believed to be either Mrs. John Meier or Mrs. Robert Hunnell.

The five were drowned when a skiff in which they were being ferried across the river to their homes here capsized and went under a ferry, tied up at Mason City.

Those drowned were: Mrs. A. C. Foulk, Mrs. John Meier, Mrs. Robert Hunnell, and Mrs. Will Spannagel and her seven months old baby.

COUNTY BUDGET REQUEST LOWER IS SHOWN; RATE MAY BE REDUCED

Rate Fixing Must Await Finish Of Re-appraisal Work—Increased Valuation Would Cut Tax Rates

Tentative budget for Greene County for the fiscal year beginning January 1, 1927, drawn up and approved by County Commissioners calls for $328,-000, an appreciable reduction from the 1926 budget request for the county which totalled $341,900, it was revealed Tuesday.

If the county budget for next year is approved as a whole by the county board of revision and state tax commission there is a possibility the Greene County tax rate for 1927 will be lower than this year. Commissioners are hopeful this will be the case as it was with this end in view the budget was drawn up.

The tentative budget shows a reduction of about $20,000 in the request for the county general fund while the difference is made in the Infirmary fund. Requests in all other funds are practically the same as this year, the largest item listed being $102,000 for the road fund.

Budget requests for 1927 in the various funds follow: County fund, $80,000; Infirmary fund, $22,000; Children's Home fund, $14,000; indigent soldiers' fund, $2,500; blind relief fund, $2,500;

IMPORTANT RADIO CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE DURING YEAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Since the breakdown in broadcasting regulation forty-five new stations have been licensed, eight stations discontinued, thirty-seven stations changed their wave lengths, thirty-four stations increased their power, four stations changed their call signals and eighteen stations changed ownership, according to the October issue of Stevenson's Bulletin of Radio Broadcasting Stations.

These are more changes than have occurred during any similar period since broadcasting began. They bring the total number of stations to 569 compared to 528 a year ago.

At the present there are 164 stations operating between 280 and 545 meters and 416 between 200 and 280 meters. Three months ago there were 116 stations operating between 280 and 545 meters and 416 between 200 and 280.

Among the important stations increasing their power are the following: KVE, St. Louis, increased its power from 500 to 5,000 watts; WPG, Atlantic City, from 500 to 5,000 watts; WBZ, Springfield, Mass., from 2,000 to 5,000 watts; WWAE, Plainfield, Ill., from 500 to 10,000 watts.

SENTENCED TO DIE

COSHOCTON, O., Sept. 28—Robert F. Thompson was sentenced to be executed January 8 for the murder of Gertrude D'Ostrophe, 10. A motion for a new trial was over-ruled before sentence was pronounced.

ESTATE LARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28—The will of Dr. Louis Grossman, Rabbi Emeritus who died September 21, filed for probate here today was estimated at $90,000. The bulk of the estate was left to Dr. Charles Aaron, Detroit. Other bequests to charity and for educational funds were made.

BUSINESS CONTINUED GOOD IN AUGUST SAYS MONTHLY REPORT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—While business generally continued to prosper during August, production in some basic industries declined, the federal reserve board's monthly business summary published today revealed.

Textile mill industry and production of steel ingots, zinc and petroleum increased while the output of pig iron, lumber, coal, copper, cement and sugar was smaller than the month before.

Automobile production, however ,increased considerably in August and was larger than any month since April.

Factory payrolls, after declining in July increased in August.

Midwestern states during the month increased building activities but in eastern and southeastern states the volume of building was smaller than a year ago. Contracts for consideration of residential buildings, were smaller than in August, 1925, while for industrial buildings increased.

Wholesale commodity prices declined more than one per cent during August, reflecting largely price decreases for grains, livestock and meat products. Prices of clothing materials, fuel and metals increased while cotton, wool, sugar, building material and rubber prices showed little change in the month.

FATHER OF VICTORY OBSERVING EIGHTY FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Clemenceau Prefers Flowers Of Garden To Politics

SAINT VINCENT SUR JARD, VENDEE, France, Sept. 28.—With the winds from the sea whipping back the warmth of summer, the old Tiger of France awoke eighty-five years old this morning.

Telegrams and letters bearing famous and obscure signatures poured in from all quarters of the globe upon the man who for France made the war and made the peace—Georges Clemenceau.

This birthday, undoubtedly, meant more to Clemenceau than others, for at eighty-five.....But if it did he did not show it. The old man who re-shuffled the destinies of Europe and Asia went about enjoying the evening of life as usual, at arm's length even from this little hamlet, dozing along like oxen that pull their primitive carts.

And he scowled at his large mail and unusual number of telegrams that arrived for him this morning, later grumbling kindly at the peasant folk who came up from the village to wish their "vieux Tigre" many more birthdays as their most distinguished townsman.

As Clemenceau took the correspondent around his little estate, he talked about himself.

"Ah, yes, I am old, but these years have been the beautiful ones of my life." And showing his constantly gloved hands, "My hands are all dried up. J'ai fait toute la guerre, I made the entire war as a sick man. At the very end, I can tell you I was tired, very tired."

The old man, whose name is scattered throughout the pages of history of the Third Republic, walks with the firmness of step of many men at sixty. But frequent gasps for breath tell his age.

"And after I left power I went to India to bag some tigers," continued France's Tiger. "The doctors told me I should hurry home, but I wouldn't until my trip was over. And since then my five years at rest in contemplation of life as I have seen it and in comparison with what I have read, have been the most bsautiful part of my life."

"Come," said the war premier, "if you are good, I will take you through my flower garden. I make the flowers grow with sea weeds. There are no walks in this garden for in a garden with walks you see the same flowers every day. Here there is always a surprise.

"This is better than politics," said the Tiger, and wistfully, probably referring to the controversy over the debts, " if my country were well, I could be completely happy."

OLD TOWN RESIDENT IN HOSPITAL AFTER COLLISION ON PIKE

Clarence Swadener May Die—Auto Driver Sought By Police

Delirious and suffering from a concussion of the brain, a possible fractured skull and severe lacerations on the right leg and about the face and body, Clarence Swadener, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Swadener, Old Town, is in Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, where physicians fear he may die as a result of a collision between his motorcycle and a roadster near Alpha on the Dayton and Xenia Pike at 7:30 p. m. Monday.

Swadener was en route to Dayton where he has been employed since last May, on the night shift at the Delco Co. plant, when his motorcycle was struck head-on by a roadster traveling in the opposite direction.

Hospital physicians say he has not regained consciousness and entertain little hope for his recovery.

Dayton police are seeking to locate and identify the driver of the automobile, who is said to have disappeared shortly after the accident, abandoning his machine. Witnesses are reported to have obtained the number of the license plates and Sheriff Morris Sharp expects to also make an investigation.

The accident occurred in front of the residence of Charles Johannes, who was the first to arrive on the scene. Swadener was taken into his house and attended by Dr. George W. Anderson, Alpha. After receiving first aid treatment, he was removed to the Dayton hospital in the ambulance of Ora G. Marker, N. Main St., Dayton.

Swadener is said to have been found unconscious on the pike in the rear of the roadster. It is the theory the youth was hurled entirely over the machine.

The driver of the machine is reported to have told Johannes before disappearing that Swadener was driving without lights. Other witnesses are said to place the responsibility upon the driver whose car, it is said, was being driven without lights.

Identity of the injured cyclist was not established until early Tuesday morning by Dr. Anderson. Swadener has several fingers missing from his right hand and this fact is believed to have aided in tracing him.

His parents were informed of the accident by Dr. Anderson Tuesday morning and immediately left for Miami Valley Hospital to learn the extent of his injuries.

PRIEST FILES SUIT TO RECOVER MONEY

GIRARD, Kas., Sept. 28.—Four insurance companies are named defendants in a suit filed by a Catholic priest here asking to recover $50,000 and nearly a thousand acres of land in Crawford County.

The priest, the Rev. F. M. Verdan, who has been pastor of the Catholic Church of Greenbush, Kas. near here for forty years, charges in his suit that assignments of the property were made to Francis J. Matre, Chicago, as an investment in the insurance company's and that he has received no returns for his investment.

Matre and his associates are said to have formed the insurance companies. The priest states he lost 1,440 acres of land in Kansas and a residence property in Illinois, in addition to the land he is seeking to recover.

ASSIGN MINISTERS AT ELYRIA MEETING

ELYRIA, O., Sept. 28.—The annual conference of the Northeast Ohio Conference of Methodist Churches closed here today with the assignment of more than 500 ministers to charges.

The final resolution passed by the conference concerned wars. The resolution neither supported nor condemned pacificism and was a compromise between former pledges of loyalty and the "peace at any price" resolution of 1925.

Bishop Theodore Henderson worked until 4 a. m. today with a corps of assistants preparing the assignments which were announced this morning.

MADE MODERATOR

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 28—Russell McCullough of Defiance college was elected moderator of Toledo Presbytery at the annual fall meeting here.

The resignation of Rev. George Young, Tiffin Presbyterian Church was accepted.

FAMOUS HOUSE VAUDEVILLE TEAM IS BROKEN UP AS TERMS DRAW TO CLOSE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Two of the team of what blase Washington calls the House vaudevillians are about to pass from the congressional stage.

Rep. William D. Upshaw, Dem., whose tourneys against the demon rum have often furnished the house with the spiciness of a sideshow, has been beaten in the Georgia primaries. The engagement of Rep. John P. Hill, "Rider of the White Charger" and defiant wet, terminates in March, and he has been defeated in an attempt to win the Republican senatorial nomination in Maryland.

With their passing the House must look elsewhere for its histronic talent. It has many other performers who help brighten the sometimes dull and uninteresting sessions but none are in the class with Upshaw and Hill.

A dry blast by Upshaw or Hill speech demanding modification of the Volstead act invariably started an afternoon of fireworks. Both always draw a large crowd of listeners when they aired themselves on the prohibition question.

Hill acquired the title of "Rider of the White Charger" after a big wet demonstration and parade in Baltimore several years ago. He headed the parade on a snow white horse.

Upshaw termed him "Moses," declaring the wets needed someone like the Biblical character "to lead them out of the wilderness." Hill became known nationally when he made wine in his cellar and was arrested and acquitted in a test case.

Kidnapped Priest Bares Terrorism

That an organized system of terrorism, with hooded mobs performing deeds of violence upon defenseless and often innocent persons, exists in Virginia is the statement of Rev. Father Vincent B. Warren, above, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Norfolk, who himself was recently kidnapped and attacked by a band of 28 men who were clad in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan.

EIGHTY NINE PROFS FROM O. S. U. FOUND IN NEW "WHO'S WHO"

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 27.—Eighty-nine of 201 full professors on the Ohio State University faculty are sufficiently prominent and important to be included in the latest edition of "Who's Who in America." Fifteen additional faculty members are recognized in the newest volume.

Chief among the new additions to the list from Ohio State's campus is President George W. Rightmire. Seven of the eleven deans of the colleges and forty-one chairmen of departments of instruction also are included in the university's contribution to "Who's Who."

Ohio State professors making their debut in the present volume include Firman E. Bear, soils specialist; C. E. Boord, chemist; J. N. Bradford, architect; Harold Burtt, psychology; Francis Coker, political scientist; Verne A. Dodd, surgeon; William L. Evans, chemist; Ralph Fanning, fine arts.

Homer Hockett, historian; Edward Mack, chemist; Edgar McNeal, Edwin Pahlow, history of education; Ross Purdy, ceramicist; and Vivian Thayer, education.

The meeting opened with the salute to the flag and prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Walter Dean. Mrs. William Rickels and Mrs. Ohmer Ttate, delegates from the local unit to the state convention at Elyria were present and gave excellent reports of the meeting.

A social time followed, with a musical program by Kathryn Hibbert, Kathryn Mangan, pianists and Guido Pesavento, violinist, students from the musical department of St. Brigid's School, which was greatly enjoyed. A dainty refreshment course was served by Mrs. William H. Sanders, chairman and Mrs. W. R. Bennington.

DAUGHTER OF YELLOW SPRINGS WOMAN MARRIED

The marriage of Mrs. Adeline Titus, daughter of Mrs. May Bowman Showell, Yellow Springs, to Mr. Edward Leeper, Philadelphia, which was solemnized at noon Saturday at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., is being announced.

Only members of the wedding party attended the service. Among those present were Mrs. May Bowman Showell, and Mrs. Francis Comstock (Darlington Showell) of Princeton, N. J.

Mr. Leeper is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leeper, of Wayne, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. He is a graduate of Princeton. During the World War he served as an officer in the navy. At present he is practicing law in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Leeper will spend a month's wedding trip in Canada, before going to Wayne, Pa., where they will make their home.

SPRING VALLEY P. T. A. PLANS RECEPTION

Parent-Teacher Association, of Spring Valley Twp., is sponsoring a reception for the teachers of the township, Thursday evening, September 30, at 7:30, in the new high school.

CARDS ATTRACT WOMEN TO CLUB

Despite the inclement weather, Monday was a pleasant day at the Country Club, where a group of thirty-five women spent the morning with cards and later enjoyed luncheon.

Rain made golf impossible and the card tables were filled with lovers of the game.

An "open meeting" will be held next Monday when all club members will be entertained with cards.

Mrs. H. C. Messenger, N. King St., left Monday night, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. N. H. Fairbanks and her sister, Miss Marceline. Fairbanks, Springfield, on a motor trip East. They will visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington, etc.

BUSTLE EFFECTS RETURN TO STYLE

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The bustle-bow is introduced for those who have overcome plumpness by fair means or foul. For in spite of the size of the bustle bow or drape at the rear of the frock one must still appear to have the framework of an eel. For those who can wear the bow becomingly it is one of the most fascinating styles of the coming season.

As a rule, the bustle-backed frock is made with a slightly blousing bodice which extends just below the normal waistline. Beneath the blouse a wide sash extends about the hip line attached to an apron front or to side panels. The sash terminates in a butterfly bow at the rear of the skirt. Where the apron-front effect is used it extends well toward the rear of the skirt and is often finished with a soft flounce or flounces at the hem. The tying of the sash shortens the length of the apron slightly at the rear.

Black satin or crepe are most popular materials for the bustle gown since higher colors add to the effect of one's size. A particularly attractive gown which uses black satin as it's medium has a slightly bloused bodice extending just below the normal waistline, a flat sash of self material to which are attached gathered sidepanels and which ties in a bow at the rear, huge kimono-shaped sleeves and a high neckline formed by a straight piece of material which ties in a bow at the rear of the neck. At the bottom of the side-panels are two deep ruffles lined in Chapel red. The wide sleeves are likewise lined in red for a distance of eight inches from the hem.

Another lovely bustle model which is made of black silk crepe uses a long sash which is at least a foot in width. The top of the sash is attached to the bodice just below the scant blouse and the sash lays in folds when drawn about bustle models, a rounding front apron finished with a ruffle lined in gold cloth is attached to the front of the deep sash. When these models are off the figure they are not particularly good looking since it remains to the tautness of the sash to shorten the front apron. The tying of the bow also is of importance since it must give the bustle effect without adding bulk to the figure. Sleeves of most bustle gowns are wide, often being attached to the gown only at the shoulders in which they are merely straight tube-shape affairs.

Dame Fashion Shunts Bright Colors In Favor Of Duller Shades For Fall

Dame Fashion is in a subtle mood. She has cast aside her bright vivid colors, and the pastel shades of Spring and Summer. In their place, for her Fall and Winter garments, more quiet tones and duller shades have attracted her eye and will meet with the approval of her followers.

We are sure Dame Fashion will not be depriving her cohorts of beauty and chic with her selection of the dark shades for the new seasons. There is an air of distinction and richness in each of the new, fashionable colors, and any woman arrayed in the chosen shades can rest assured she is suitably gowned with a coat and chapeau of the same tones.

And, characteristic of the frivolous mood of Dame Fashion and her love of a disconcerting note, she has introduced an occasional touch of color. Sometimes there is a bit of gypsy embroidery to give a mysterious air of old Romany to an otherwise simple and quiet frock. And again, she may dictate a wide and flowing sleeve, which relieves the straight simplicity of the silk or woolen frock. There are dainty, fancy pockets and a narrow neckline of a rich, bright tone.

But, in the main, Dame Fashion has decreed that frocks, coats and hats shall be of a richness and darkness of color, that is a distinct departure from previous seasons. Xenia buyers and saleswomen are elated over the early models arriving. They are pleased with the simplicity of line, that adapts itself to all figures and the dark shades, that dispel the disconcerting effect of many and varied bright shades.

Black, Xenia buyers declare, is in the lead for Fall and Winter in dresses, and quite popular in coats and hats. Crepe-back satin, other satins, crepes and all silky materials lead in popularity with rich twills and woolens for cooler months.

Next in order comes chanel red, a deep rich red. This color is shown in frocks, coats and hats. Other colors, which carry out the dark-shade decree, are navy blue, jungle green, and dark tans. The larger number of frocks show the blouse and bolera effects. The straight lines are broken with a two-piece effect. Theer are tiers and tucks to relieve the severity. The surplice effect is striking in many models. Despite their dark shades and straight lines , the dresses follow no one character, but are for dress and sport. The straight lines are adaptable to both stout and slim and are meeting with the approval of women.

Just as she decided on touches of bright colors to relieve the sombre note in dresses, Dame Fashion has dictated fur for all coats. Cloth coats are trimmed with fur collar and cuffs. The marvella, velsheen and other rich materials, in black, wine, grackle (grey), browns and other dark shades are combined with fox, platinum, wolf, beaver, and squirrel. The straight lines are broken with fancy pockets, cord tucking and inserts of self material. Xenia stores are showing handsome fur coats in silver muskrat, Australian seal, beaverette and kitskin. The last named fur is just being introduced and is bound to meet with popular favor. It is of a rich softness in toned grey, the light fur next to the skin toning into a deep grey. One particularly striking model in a local shop was of kitskin, a sport model, reversible, lined with natural kasha which could be worn outside, with fur collar and cuffs.

Sport coats are often fur-trimmed, but in the main are of a brighter combination, of plaids, checks, and novelties.

The same colors that predominate in frocks lead in hats. Chanel red and claret red, vie with jungle green and the wood shades of brown. Sand and black are also good. Large hats are being shown for dress, with the smaller models popular for street and sport. Soft felts and velours are the "best sellers" with velvets, silk combinations and satins coming in close. The small types are crushable and easily adapted to any style.

Altogether the Fall and Winter attired woman will have a smart appearance, the rich, dull tones of her costume harmonizing into a quiet but chic effect.

What Is So Personal As Your CLOTHES?

Quality, to express itself thoroughly, must be a co-ordinated attainment. The finest fabrics ever loomed will not stand up under poor tailoring. Nor will good tailoring bolster up a cloth that quickly deteriorates. But when good fabrics and good tailoring are combined then it's worth while laying on a veneer of distinctive style—as we do. PAY NOT ONLY REWARD

Consciousness of work well done does not go far with any of us, notwithstanding moralists to the effect that it is reward enough. The pay envelope is indispensable, grossly material though it be, and it has to satisfy the vast majority of toilers. The wise employer does not, however, overlook the spiritual value of a bit of appreciation otherwise expressed. Yet modern conditions are unfavorable, in large business organizations at any rate.

Not all workers can define the lack though sensible that some form of gratification is wanting. They will recognize it in the explanation given by Mme. Alla Nazimova of her decision to leave the picture stage and return to the spoken drama. She has been getting "big" money and her pictures have thrilled thousands of admirers. But Mme Nazimova craves applause.

At the end of a big scene in the studio she limps away to the clatter of mechanical devices and the orders of the director as to when next to report for work. On the vocal stage the death agonies that she makes real to her audiences are sweetened by the thunders of hand-clapping as the curtain descends. That's the only real reward for the actor appropriately tempermental. Some, to be sure, find their satisfaction in the size of the pay check they receive each week or month It roars louder than any audience, refined or unrefined. It should be assurance enough of work well done, and it is for most. Still, the satisfaction of the spirit is a prize.

Mme. Nazimova is to be congratulated on being able to work where she will get both kinds of reward.

STRICKEN FLORIDA

The Florida disaster appeals in its suddenness as much as in its awfulness. Cities that had been built to greatness as if by magic have been made waste by the elements overnight. The work of men's hands seems gone for naught. Faith itself seems shattered. Uncounted hundreds of the poor bodies that but yesterday worked so happily, believed so buoyantly, lie broken, dead or dying.

Yet the dirge is changing to softer theme. Calm will come as the sun again breaks through the angry skies. And with calm, the bitterness of recollection will be mellowed by the revelation of acts of unselfishness, self-sacrifice, heroism such as glorify man's greatest trials.

And then faith will return and the survivors of this horror will set themselves to the painful task of bringing order out of chaos, salvage out of loss, and to rebuilding greater, safer cities—cities more beautiful if that be possible—than those that now lie stricken.

Galveston, San Francisco, Tokio have risen from flood, or earthquake, or fire. So will Miami rise again. That Miami is a new city, devastated in its youth, may make the task the harder. But, on the other hand, Miami's youth may fire its heart to the greater courage.

That Florida's population has been drawn so generally from the country at large gives the tragedy a peculiarly national significance, makes countless thousands in distant states feel a personal grief in the destruction that was borne on the wings of the storm.

RADIO NOT NEW

Charles Kellogg, the birdman, declares that the radio is not a new idea. He says the birds have used the same idea for thousands of years, and that savages in the jungles have a system by which they send messages from one place to another in a mysterious way which can only be explained as a sort of radio. Birds learned to fly before man, so that it is not surprising they should have discovered the principle of the radio ahead of us. It has even been suggested that the original antennae were the "feelers" various insects bear upon their heads and which have always been regarded as merely serving the purpose of feeling their way about. Now it is thought they may be the means by which they communicate with their kind when at a distance. It may be true. Each new discovery helps us to make a lot of others.

THE JOURNEY OF THE SAD HEART

Shakespere speaks of the man whose elements were so mixed in him that one could stand up before all the world and say: "This was a man!"

Since this remarkable, though simple assertion, which occurred in Shakespere's great play "Julius Caesar," we of a later experience know that it takes an extraordinary mixture to really make a man.

In spiritual proportion we find the highest development in a man's character, for through it alone is a man brought to the roots of beauty. It is from here that he grows his dream.

But the dreamer must be a poet as well, and he is a sad and lonely figure who is strong enough to make his way through the makeshift intricacies of mechanical gain and commercial power, to where his star rests.

I recently read of the return to England of the great sculptor, Albert Gilbert, self-exiled nearly a quarter of a century ago. His was an ideal of no compromise with perfection. Loss of all he had meant nothing beside this determination on his part to carry out the expression of his heart without trimming. But this meant a storm of criticism, and finally debt and a broken heart. And so he left his native land intending never to return.

But the other day Gilbert did return and he is to complete one of his most noted works, left unfinished. Much is learned in twenty years, and so it is believed that the great artist will be permitted to end his sad journey in triumph.

You can't tie a sensitive heart to a rule.

The understanding heart has its own garden of beauty. Its flowers are its own best loved. So that when the sad road outside tires too much, it can find its garden again, its beauty and its love.

What does it cost to be a well-dressed clubman?

Take Warren Dow for an authority. He says the male of the species is prone to tear his hair, moan in a loud tone of voice, and otherwise register grief in large quantities when his wife's bills for millinery and evening gowns come rolling in about the first of the month.

Yet, he continues, when the masculine fashion plate steps forth correctly attired for an evening at the opera or other social functions, the combined cost of the various parts of his costume will easily equal the price tag on a new flivver coupe.

Ramon Novarro is noted in Hollywood for being correctly garbed on every conceivable occasion. It costs the star about $450 to be outfitted as we will presently show—and the end is far from reacned. Studs and links remain to be obtained to complete the costume. The exact cost of these is a matter of individual preference ranging from a possible minimum of $25 or $50 to well into the thousands.

Here is how Novarro spends his $430, Dow says: High silk hat, familiarly known as a "topper," $10; custom-tailored suit of black broadcloth, including trousers and swallow-tailed coat, $175; vest, or waistcoat of, white silk material, $25; gloves, also of white silk, $5; patent leather pumps, $15; opera top coat, of black broadcloth, $75.

White silk tie and bat-wing collar, $2.50; stiff-bosom shirt, of linen, $5; white silk handkerchief, $3; socks, plain black and heavy silk, $2.50; walking stick, $12; total cost of outfit, minus studs and links is $430.

The truth will out it is alleged and nobody suspected that Louise Fazenda was married until they found out she was going to be married again. Louise, one critic has it, is as clever off the screen as she is on, and cagey as well, and even to her close friends her life is more or less of a mystery.

So it was quite a surprise to Hollywood when she filed suit for divorce under the name of Louise Smith, with the intention of marrying Hal Wallis as soon as she was free. Hal Wallis is head of Warner Brothers' publicity department, and almost as nice as Louise and his devotion to her wasn't much of a secret. But nobody knew that Noel Smith, a director working right under her nose on the Warner lot, was even casually connected with Louise's past. Even he and Louise seemed to forget that he was her husband.

HEARS EVANGELIST IN CONSPIRACY CASE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2 —District Attorney Asa Keyes today was to attempt to show that Aimee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist is guilty of the sins against which she has preached from her pulpit in Angelus Temple and should be held for trial in superior court on charges of conspiring to defeat justice.

Mrs. McPherson was to be given a preliminary hearing on the charges contained in affidavits upon which warrants for her arrest with four associates were issued. The charges grow out of two alleged "confessions" of women that they were hired by her to pose as the "Miss X", mysterious woman companion of Kenneth Ormiston, former radio operator of Angelus Temple at Carmel By The Sea last Summer during Miss McPherson's disappearance.

THE NEWS A GREAT EDUCATOR IN THE WISE HANDLING OF MONEY

How can a man or woman, with little or no experience in investing learn to handle his savings wisely, for the bettering of his own or his family's condition? Where can he go to get readily understandable, practical information without loss of time or interference with other activities.

There's a quick, practical answer to these questions, right under the nose of every person who reads a responsible newspaper with capably edited financial news and business news. The person of adult intelligence who will give only 20 minutes a day to reading such financial news will in a remarkable short time be able to avoid most of the tricks of fakers and bucket shops and to discriminate between the honest and the twilight zone in investigation.

What should the reader look for? The daily market reports?

No. The markets are so big, price fluctuations mean little to anyone who has only small knowledge of what is behind them. Look for the news items that tell of the successful and the unsuccessful business operations, of the businesses that are making money, of lines of business that are dragging bottom, of dividends declared of dividends passed, of bonds called for payment before they are due and of the issues of new bonds and stocks by recognized businesses and dependable governments.

What can the reader get from all this? Isn't it too technical?

First, he can get rid of the money losing idea that it is practical to get something for nothing. The huge dream-like profits many people imagine are the rare exceptions. Almost every enterprise has to plow right back into its business a large part of its profits if it is to continue successful. As a rule, the dependable business can pay only a fair, reasonable return. The reader will learn from news of this kind what lines of business seem more dependable as investments and which individual businesses more desirable. He will learn that bond houses and security dealers are known by the company they keep and that the first essential in safe investing is to take time to learn the character and reputation of the security dealer.

As to technical terms, there's virtually nothing in the financial page that adult intelligence cannot easily comprehend. There's no mystery in safe investing. It's wholly a matter of finding financial enterprises that are honestly and capably managed. For many, reading financial news will be at first a bit of a chore; they are unaccustomed to it. But gradually, with only 20 minutes a day, it will become intensely interesting, for there is no livelier romance than that of business. There's no more practical preventive from being a sucker than time so spent. There's no handier gate to the road to financial independence, for the inexperienced investor.

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

BERNARR MACFADDEN

An inflammatory skin eruption due to a gouty condition or caused by stomach and intestinal disturbances is called eczema. It is usually more or less chronic and may appear on any part of the body. It may take the form of simple redness of the skin or appear as scales, pustules or fissures. Intense irritation accompanies this disease when severe in form. Occasionally a discharge takes place from an inflamed area. The eruption that appears in many cases of fever is generally eczemic in nature.

This disease is entirely constitutional; in other words, it does not come from external causes and is seldom due to local influences. No matter where the inflammation associated with the eczema may appear, it must be remembered that the poisons which are eliminated through these particular manifestations are supplied by the blood; therefore, eczema is really a blood, or a constitutional disease, and it must be treated as such.

The ordinary methods of treating this trouble, with outside applications alone, will in many instances be inefficient. I make this statement because such treatment simply heals the surface sores without removing the constitutional cause. Naturally in many cases one cannot heal the inflamed surface no matter what drugs may be employed, and under such circumstances this is really to the advantage of the patient, for if these poisons are thrown back into the general circulation, in many instances they might be the cause of another disease far more serious in character.

Realizing, therefore, that this is a constitutional difficulty one may then proceed with a blood-purifying process, commencing with a fast. This fast should be continued for from five to twenty days, depending altogether on the vitality and weight of the patient. If one carries considerable surplus weight, then a longer period would be much more satisfactory; though even when one is possessed of surplus fatty tissue, if the vitality is low a long fast must be taken with caution. If one is normal weight than a shorter fast would be more satisfactory, indeed necessary. In practically every instance I would emphasize the importance of following this fast with a milk diet The exclusive milk diet seems to be peculiarly advantageous.

SIDELIGHTS ON Greene County History

FIRST GRAND JURY

Over in the corner sit the members of the grand jury, a fine looking body of men.

Sugarcreek Twp. is well represented on said jury. Out of fourteen, Sugarcreek has seven, namely Joseph C. Vance, John Wilson, William Buckles, Abraham Van Eaton, James Snodgrass, Robert Snodgrass, Robert Marshall and Alexander Armstrong.

Mad River Twp. for some reason, was not represented on the jury. Caesarcreek Twp. was represented by William I. Stewart, who was chosen as foreman, Martin Mendenhall and Joseph Wilson.

Beavercreek Twp., in which the court was held, was represented by John Judy, Evan Morgan, John Buckhannon and Harry Martin.

This, however, is no ordinary jury, it is the personnel of the first grand jury of Greene County.

A bowl of soup and home-made bread, a yellow bird that sings,
For happiness, it seems to me, is born of simple things.

Oh, I could write a thousand charms
I've seen along the way.
A red geranium in a pot, a little child at play,
A maple tree in scarlet dressed, a
The blush upon a maiden's cheek,
the twinkle in her eye,
patch of summer sky,
All these have set my blood aglow
and never lost their fire,
For life is filled with countless joys of which we never tire.

We weary of the fame we win and
sicken of our gold,
The joy which once we thought they had they do not seem to hold,
But man can sit with friends tonight and watch the faggots
burn
And want them all to come again
and wait for their return,
And when October tints once more
an old familiar tree
There's none so bored by beauty
but will turn his eyes to see.

No man grows weary of his fire,
his books and easy chair,
The roses he has brought to bloom
to him are always fair,
The more familiar joys become the deeper grows his love.
Who wearies of a lovely moon and all the stars above?
So mindful of the thrill of power
and all that money brings
It seems to me the lasting joys are born of simple things.

East Side - West Side —OF— New York

By Jack O'Donnell

The hall bedrooms of Gotham—not to mention the cellars and garrets of the Village—are filled with people who have left small towns and come to New York because they wanted to find solitude! For in Manhattan solitude is truly gorgeous. Here, elbowed by millions, one may be truly alone. In small cities, a man may build walls around himself, but his actions occupy the thoughts of a circle of acquaintances. He is bound by the homogeneous nature of the civilized community.

Here all can be drowned in the general clamor. Walk up Fifth Avenue—you will neither be seen, heard nor considered. You may invite your soul at 42nd Street and Broadway. Indeed, right on the fringe of Times Square is a hostelry called the Hermitage.

In the howling darkness of the subway, you may wedge yourself down, a tabloid newspaper in one ear, a baby's fist in the other, and enjoy enchanted moments of a completely separate existence.

Watch the people crushed on the car platform. Their physical juxta-position would make a sardine whimper with envy. Arms, legs and clothes are pinned tight in the particular pose in which they were caught when the onslaught came—an elbow raised unnaturally, a woman's hat cocked back, a boy's leg half off the floor. Yet each person hermetically sealed in his own thoughts, happy in being alone.

Way down deep in every one's heart, anyway, is a longing to live alone in a garret, and be solitary in a crowd.

Young girls at the peach-bloom age receive a Million Dollar Polish i: New York's elite finishing schools for refined Daughters of Decorum.

Medium-weight matrons with an English accent and a knowledge of French grammar make a good living by preparing these wealthy young ladies to become debutantes.

Finishing schools are as numerous in the upper west side as pickle wagons in the Bowery.

The other afternoon I was at a matinee of "Arms and the Man," and sat behind a delegation of young maids from a school, guarded by two robust and seemly spinsters. After the first act, in which the hero made so bold as to fall asleep in the heroine's boudoir because he happened to be very tired the two guardians held an earnest conference as to the advisability of allowing their charges to stay for the rest of the show. After all, their daddies were paying $2500 a year for their protection.

Sometimes I get tired of hearing fellows who tell me they "never had a chance." Specially after walking through 57th Street and seeing a seedy old person without any teeth, selling brass polish from a tripod, while the cop at the corner was looking the other way. In the ten minutes that I stood and watched I saw him take in $12— considerably better than a dollar a minute.

What chance had he?

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Bride: "Can 'Chicken Mousse' be made with two or three cups of cold cooked chicken? My husband and I generally have a small fowl on Sundays and there is about this much chicken left over. If so, please give me a recipe for the dish. I thought it would be a rather unusual one to serve another young married conple who are friends of ours and who come often to supper Sunday nights."

Answer: Yes, the mousse can be made with two cups of chicken diced. It is a delicate yet satisfying, nourishing way to serve fowl left-overs. Here is the recipe: Chicken Mousse; Into a pan put one cup of either canned (strained) chicken soup, or one cup of the "stock" in which a fricasseed fowl has been cooked. Add to this two tablespoons of granulated gelatine softened in one-half cup of cold water; put the mixture over the fire, and heat till boiling, stirring constantly. Then remove it from the range, add to it the two cups of cooked chicken and more salt and pepper if not highly enough seasoned to suit individual taste, and beat till cold. Fold in one-half cup of heavy or "double" cream whipped stiff (measured before beating). Turn the fluffy mixture into a mold and set away in the ice box. When firm, turn it out onto a platter to serve. (Note: To free any kind of gelatine mixture from the tin, sink the mold up to its rim in boiling or very hot water for just a moment, then remove. You will find that the contents of the mold will slip out easily after this treatment.)

Mrs. W. E. M.: "I was interested in your recent reply to a Column Reader who had asked how to remove stains from her porcelain-topped kitchen table. My table also became stained from such acids as you mentioned (rhubarb, tomato and lemon,) and I cleaned it, just as I scour my sink, with scouring powder, rubbing it as little as I could. It is not quite as shiny now, but looks better than if the stains were still there."

Answer: I am sure that the Reader Friend who first introduced this subject in our column, will be much interested in your letter. Thank you for it.

Modish Mitzi LAKE MICHIGAN PRESENTS AN INTERESTING VIEW Jay V. Jay

From Mitzi's hotel in Chicago, which overlooks the Oak Street Beach on Lake Michigan, she can see many well dressed women. She's curious to know more about them. What sort of hats they are wearing. Well, she will find out. Ingenuity is one of her most dominant characteristics.

The opera glasses have been used before, for other things than opera. Mitzi is training them on the passing styles and getting a remarkably good focus. Mitzi wears a negligee of taffeta with pleating around a fichu collar for this particular indoor sport.

And this is what she sees. The smartly dressed young woman with the flower on her shoulder wears a trotteur type of felt hat with three straps and buckles on the side. Next to her, is a hat of Indo-Chinese design. It's trimmed with little square ornaments.

The tam shape with the side fastened with a pin of brilliants is very smart. The beret hat has a trimming of felt leaves. "I think," remarks Mitzi in her hotel room 15 stories above lake level. "I think hats are nine-tenths crown." Which shows how accurately Mitzi sees fashions even at a long distance.

SUNDAY HITTING FAMINE HAD BAD EFFECT ON RESERVE RECORD

Sunday's burlesque exhibition of baseball in the series tilt with the Merchants, the aftermath of an hour's delay in starting the game, played havoc with the Reserve team batting average.

The team batting fell off to an even .300 mark and although Durnbaugh went hitless for the first time, reducing his average forty-five points, he continues to lead the Reserve heavy hitters with a mark of .400.

In twenty-five games this year, the Reserves have won eighteen games, lost six and tied one. Individual batting records follow:

INDIANS WILL RACE WHITES IN MARATHON

One of the most unique sporting events in history will be held on Cheyenne Mountain at Broadmoor, Colorado Springs, Colo., on October 10. While it is to be a mountain marathon open to all amateurs it will in reality be a contest between Indian and white men long distance runners. Both the Hopi and Zuni Indian tribes have had braves in training for the past two months from whom they will select six of their best to compete with western long distance champions.

Not only will it be unusual because of the contest between Indians and whites but it will be the first mountain marathon ever held in this country. The course is six and one-quarter miles from the toll gate to the summit of Cheyenne Mountain over the new but already famous Broadmoor-Cheyenne Mountain Highway which has an average grade of seven and one-half per cent with 256 curves and swings; the start will be at an elevation of 6,710 feet above sea level and the finish 9,130 feet above sea level. It is planned to make this an annual and an international event.

PLANS CHANGED

Because of adverse weather conditions, scheduled practice for Tilton's Thirty Three football eleven Tuesday night at Cincinnati Ave. Park has been called off and instead the team will meet at 7 o'clock in the gymnasium of Xenia Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, E. Main St. All members of the squad are urged to be present on time.

DETECTIVE FINED BY JUDGE WRIGHT

E. G. Kindle, Springfield, said to be connected with the state prohibition enforcement department at Columbus, was found guilty of reckless driving at his trial before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday morning and fined $10 and costs.

The detective, who at times in the past has been employed for liquor law enforcement work in Greene County, was arrested last week by Patrolman Charles Thompson on an affidavit filed by Hollis Peterson, near Yellow Springs.

Kindle was charged with driving at a rate of speed greater than thirty-five miles an hour on the Springfield and Xenia Pike August 26. It is said he figured in a slight auto collision. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned.

SUED FOR DIVORCE

Her husband struck her and injured her while in a fit of rage during the early part of September and as a result she fears he will do serious harm Martha E. Colvin, Spring Valley, charges in a suit for divorce from John E. Colvin, same addess, filed in the Montgomery County Common Pleas Court Monday.

His wife further alleges that fits of passion approximating brutal tyranny have made it impossible to live with her husband.

"Not Possible To Classify" — By Mack Sauer

SCRUBBING THE STATUES

Yesterday I talked with the man who washes the statues in the state house grounds. He always heats the water before he dashes it over the backs of Ohio's noted sons, so it won't chill them.

"For years I have been bathing the statuary in the capitol grounds," he said. "I have polished the buttons on General Sheridan's waist-coat, dusted off William McKinley's trousers and even rubbed shoulders with General Grant."

"What do you think of Ohio's noted sons?" I inquired.

"They are cold, hard, unfeeling men," he came back. "And between you and me General Philip Sheridan's head is beginning to turn gray here in the sun. There is a piece out of his left ear and his collar is getting dirty."

I inquired of the interesting workman if any of the famed men seemed to mind the water.

"Well," he said, "Salmon P. Chase just smiles right through it all. Yes, I guess Salmon takes to water better than any of the rest of them."

He then turned to scrubbing James A. Garfield's mustache and drying the neck of Rutherford B. Hayes, all the time having a rather dissatisfied look on his face.

"You must enjoy your work here," I ejaculated, chewing my gum madly.

"Yes, but if these dumb lips could only speak a word of praise, or give me a tip for shining their shoes," he moaned as he splashed a bucket of suds down Stanton's pantsleg.

I sat down on the grass and began feeding peanuts to the squirrels. Then I took out a piece of paper and beagn writing this for the readers of The Gazette. When I came to my senses I said:

"Darn that cider."

CHEVROLET DEALER SERVICE INSPIRES SALES OF THIS CAR

The Chevrolet Motor Co., in one division of its service department, is spending over half a million dollars annually on a service promotion program. This program consists of aiding its dealer organization in improving its shop methods and equipment as well as its personnel, in order to give Chevrolet owners better and more efficient service.

Service promotion deals with the efficient layout, equipping, and operating of the dealer's service station. It offers a standardized plan of shop layout, making available special Chevrolet tool equipment, and provides assistance to the dealer organization in properly installing these methods. The flat rate method of charging for repair work is suggested in this plan as it insures an equitable charge for both the owner and the dealer.

The proper training of the dealer's personnel is taken care of by the operation of twenty-two permanently located service schools in different parts of the United States. These schools are attended by Chevrolet dealers, their service managers, shop foremen and mechanics who receive an intensive training course in the proper methods and tools to use in repairing Chevrolet cars. Special courses are provided for dealers, their service managers and shop foremen on the subject of shop management.

As a result of this increased efficiency in its dealer's service, Chevrolet is achieving widespread recognition and the quality of its service is becoming more and more a factor in promoting new car sales.

Lang Chevrolet Co., Green St., will be glad to show you this car.

COUNTY BUDGET TO BE LOWER; TAX RATE MAY BE SLICED HERE

mother's pension fund, $4,000; election fund, $4,000; judicial fund, $8,000; library fund, $3,000; interest and sinking fund $88,000; road fund, $102,000.

According to County Auditor R. O. Wead the Xenia city, county and city school tax rates for 1927 cannot be computed until the tax duplicate is prepared and the reappraisal of real estate is ascertained. This work will not be finished btfore some tim in Novmtaoin shrdlu cmfwyp vbgkqj etaoin ber at the earliest.

Auditor Wead believes the tax duplicate will be higher because of estimated higher property valuations and consequently this may have a bearing on possibly lowering the various tax rates in the county's fifty-four taxing districts.

Xenia city's 1927 budget calls for more money for operating expenses than for 1926 but even then the total 1926 rate of $26 per $1,000 property valaution may be rtduced should the tax duplicate be sufficiently greater. Xenia schools also have asked for an increased budget and the same situation prevails.

However, the general county tax rate of 6.10 mills which includes the 2.60 countl rate, 1.50 for the interest and sinking fund and two-mill special levy, will undoubtedly be lowered in view of the reduction in the 1926 county budget and the anticipated increase in the tax duplicate.

NASH COMPANY ADDS NEW EXECUTIVE TO STAFF IS ANNOUNCED

Effective October 15, C. W. Nash, president of The Nash Motors Co., announces the appointment of M. H. Pettit as vice president and assistant general manager of the company. In referring to the addition of Mr. Pettit to the executive personnel of the Company, Mr. Nash says, "Mr. Pettit comes to the company from the Simmons Co., of Kenosha, Wis., and New York, with which company he has been associated for the past three years, working his way up to his present position of vice president and general manager.

When Mr. Pettit made connections with the Simmons Co., three years ago, he resigned the position as vice president of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Co., of Racine, Wis., with which company he had been associated for twenty years, being responsible for the manufacturing activities of that company.

"The addition of Mr. Pettit to the executiive force of the company in no way changes the responsibility of the present executives, but will help relieve their present heavy burdens.

"The very substantial development of The Nash Motors Company, and the prospect of continued opportunity for further sound growth, has brought to the executive management of the company increasing responsibility, and it is the policy of the management to maintain executive strength in proportion to the company's needs.

"The addition of Mr. Pettit to our present unchanged executive group makes a strong contribution to our ability to continue the prosperous and growing development of the company in the automobile industry."

European Beret Becomes Popular With Flappers

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — Two youthful motion picture actresses returning from abroad with navy blue Beret skull-tams perched pertly on their heads started something which the flappers are finishing. These tiny tams or Berets, duplicates of those worn by European fishermen, are merely two small circles of cloth sewn together with a round head-aperture finished with a narrow headband. A piece of rolled cloth shaped like a firecracker decorates the center crown. Young girls wear these wee tams low over their foreheads for street and sports occasions.

"Roll your own' is a slogan which many smart women are following. Dozens of little shops are selling unshaped hoods of felt or velour and Milady sits before the mirror and rolls the hood into semblance of a hat while the milliner pins, whacks and sews. At the end of the tussle one has a near duplicate of an import for $7.50. Each shop has numerous models which can be copied in individual headsizes if one wishes the usual thing. Due to the sudden change from boyish to high-crowned shapes this making-on-the-head idea permits one to have an individual model at a nominal cost. Boyish felts still retain their prestige for sportswear however.

Two-toned velvet turbans draped in high-crown effect are among the popular Fall millinery models but unless these carry out the color scheme of the costume they fall far from being smart. Usually the contrasting color is introduced by narrow circular strips extending about the crown although geometrical designs and small diamond-shaped insets are more interesting.

When the color contrast is too pronounced the effect is not as smart as when two well-blended shades of one color are used. Chanel red combined with a lighter pinkish red, jungle green combined with lighter green, brown and burnt-orange, etc., have the blended idea. Unless the two-toned hat harmonizes perfectly with the costume it is better to choose a plain colored velvet model, a shade deeper than the costume.

Velvet must be considered a material for dresswear. It should not be used for sportswear or with strictly tailored outfits. In almost every instance the velvet hat carries out the draped idea which makes it suitable for dress or semi-dress occasions only.

OFFICERS OF XENIA COMPANY QUALIFY FOR PROMOTION

Captain Leroy V. John and four sergeants of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, successfully passed their examinations for promotion at Columbus Monday, it was announced Tuesday.

The examinations were held by the adjutant general's department of the national guard at the House of Representatives in the state house. This is a departure from the usual custom and under a new policy recently made operative, the examinations are held at Columbus. Heretofore the examining board visited the city in question.

Captain John, one of three others in the state to take the examination for the rank of major, qualified for this promotion.

Sergeants Frank Davis, Alva Burgert, Jesse Burgert and William Thompson qualified as second lieutenants and their names will be placed on the eligible list to become officers should any vacancies occur in the future.

The examinations began at 9 o'clock Monday morning and lasted until late in the afternoon.

ADAM F. LONG DIES SUDDENLY MONDAY

Suffering a sudden heart attack while recovering from an attack of intestinal grip, Adam F. Long, 73, died at his home, 119 Home Ave., Monday evening at 5 o'clock. He had been ill a week but was able to be up Monday and suffered the fatal attack while resting.

Mr. Long was born near Lancaster, O., October 22, 1852. He resided in Xenia twenty-seven years and was employed on Greene County road work.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ellen Long, who is confined in bed with rheumatism. The following sisters, Mrs. Samantha Middleton, Wilmington Pike; Mrs. Margaret J. Rheberg, Iowa and Mrs. Elizabeth Mercer, Antwerp, O., survive with two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Jones, at home and Mrs. Earl Striker, Port William, who was reared in the Long home. Two other children preceded him in death.

Mr. Long was a member of First M. E. Church, Xenia. Funeral services will be conducted privately on account of Mrs. Long's illness, at the home, Wednesday at 2:30 with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the home Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

CHANGES PLEA AND SUBMITS TO FINE

Frank Bauer, 31, Shakertown Road, pleading guilty to a charge of illegal possession of liquor, was fined $200 and costs by R. O. Copsey, justice of the peace, Monday afternoon.

He had previously entered pleas of not guilty to two charges of liquor law violation but changed his plea Monday when a second charge of possessing implements designed for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor was withdrawn.

Bauer was arrested a week ago in a raid on his home one mile west of Alpha when Deputy Sheriffs John Baughn and George Spencer uncovered a seventy-five gallon capactiy still and two gallons of whiskey.

SUFFER IN STORM

Mr. and Mrs. John Dymond, Washington St., have received a letter from their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. S. Paul Long, at Miami, Fla., telling of their experience in the recent hurricane. Their house was badly damaged the roof being blown off, and every window and door shattered by the wind. Their small child and Mrs. Long were cut by flying glass but not seriously. Their furniture was rain-soaked.

CHAPTER 12

IN GREENWICH VILLAGE

With a heart attune to happiness, Mary Forrest walked by the side of Philip Andover through the Bohemian section of New York that bears the name of Greenwich Village.

"How quaint!" she exclaimed stopping to peer through a stable door that was ajar. In the interior at a wooden table made of trestle-boards, sat a crowd of men and women, eating. A great stable lantern, swinging from above, gave fitful light.

Next door to this odd hostelry was a charming Queen Anne cottage, with its lintel ivy-clad.

Absurd lean-to coffee shops jostled Colonial mansions. In Grace Goodwin's Garret candles sputtered a welcoming light. Short-haired ladies and longhaired men were out aprowl for evening food.

"The intellectual fires are burning," said Philip with a little laugh, as they passed innumerable cellars where, round the open hearth, gay crowds were seated, smoking, eating, drinking and talking busily.

"It's like being at a play," smiled Mary, who had seen few plays in her life, but whom this "show" delightfully entertained. For it was "human."

The pair of them traversed the worn brick pavements. There were endless little "arty" shops with odd candelbra, ancient china, antiques of every sort— or, more modern, full of weird drawings, batik silks, hand-tinted glasses and the like.

Not a single blind was drawn down anywhere, to Mary's wonderment.

Odd, this living in the open, under every eye!

"I suggest we have a decent dinner first—for I won't vouch for the food in any of the lofts or cellars," said Philip. "Atmosphere' and 'color' are a-plenty But the cooking—query?"

He led her to the quaint Green Mule. Its painted sign out front swayed in the evening breeze. They passed through a brick-floored oddly-decorated entresol to the really lovely little restaurant.

A seven-piece negro orchestra crooned forth—upon their instruments and vocally—a song of love. The light was bluish-green. Set square into the yellow plaster walls were small, flat slabs of gass, behind which, in brilliantly-lighted water, goldfish swam. Behind several of these glass-plates, too, a yellow canary hopped and twittered on its perch. It must have thought the strong illumination of its cake was sunshine!

But the quaintest things—to Mary's eyes—were the tiny caves for humans cut into the stucco walls ,immediately below these odd appearing lamps. How could she and Philip ever get inside one?

A waiter in a linen smock of green, with an artist's tam of orange on his head, led them to an alcove.

Philip had to double up, and Mary had to stoop her head, and squeeze herself between the little bench and trestle table that was set for dinner.

"Specially designed for tete-a-tete!" Philip gave his engaging smile. "Is this Aladdin's cave? Or no!"—glancing up at the goldfish swimming directly overhead in a brightly-lit glass tank——"we're in a subterranean grotto, it appears."

They both laughed over the menu, with its comically-named dishes.

"No Green Mule pie for me," said Mary. "I'll have chicken a al King, please. That is safe."

The negro orchestra broke into a fox-trot. While the smock-clad waiter went to fetch their dinner, Philip danced with Mary on the polished floor outside the alcoves. There were several other couples dancing. Although the place was high-priced, few wore evening clothes.

Close to the negro band a magnificent live parrot swung on his golden hoop. His plumage was bright red and green and yellow, and his air aggressive. He regarded all the dancers with a hostile eye. A few of them were just a little shy of that sharp beak, for the bold bird from Jamaica was unchained, and frequently leant forward as though about to take a bite at someone.

"Heavens! He's alive!" gasped Mary.

Some of the couples were not dancing, but sitting, eating and chatting, in the small arched caves. The gold-fish tank above their heads cast golden light upon them. The whole effect was most theatrical.

Philip enjoyed Mary's unspoilt freshness, and the genuine delight she took in deciphering odd rhymes upon the wall anent the old Green Mule. In such places Luella's attitude had been a trifle blase. Nothing was new to her.

"I dance badly," apologized Mary suddenly, looking up at her tall partner with a smile. Her usually pale cheeks were flushed and radiant. At the moment she was almost beautiful. "But you can't think how awfully much I am enjoying all this."

"And so am I," said Philip, and he meant it.

The music ceased, and they went back to their particular grotto, where dinner waited them. The food was excellent. Both were hungry after their long walk .

Towards the conclusion of the meal, a dark handsome, gentlemanly man in tam and coat of velveteen entered the restaurant, carrying a tray before him which was laden wtih multi-colored little packages.

" 'Tiny Tim' and his 'soul candy,' " laughed Philip. "He's a well-educated chap, and has a marvelous line f talk. With all the classical allusions he springs at you, you feel so small and illiterate that you simply daren't refuse his Highness's wares!"

Tiny Tim approached their grotto. An ingratiating smile was on his handsome face.

"Still selling sweetmeats?" Philip greeted him. "What about the painting and writing. Tiny Tim? Or is commerce"—he nodded towards the tray—"more profitable?"

"You wrong me, sir," responded Tiny Tim, in his cultured accents, with his head held up. "I offer ambrosia food to the gods, to you and to your goddess." Here he bowed low to Mary with exaggerated courtesy. "To some, i name my wares 'love potions.' But with so beautiful a lady, to whom already you are so attached, that name would be absurd—unnecessary."

He handed Mary a rainbow-tinted package, tied with silver ribbon.

"Who eats of Tiny Tim's 'soul candy' finds the key to the Elysian Fields, where all are happy. The beautiful young lady honors me. But please remember, I am no vulgar tradesman. I am an artist and a gentleman."

Mary took her package, which contained three colored bonbons, and Philip slipped a coin into His Highness's hand.

"Quaint fellow," Philip commented, as the candy-vendor moved away. "They say he's making a fortune with his 'soul candy,' which he never did at painting! There are lots of odd, amusing characters here in the village."

He paid the check, and he and Mary left the gay Green Mule. They dropped into a low-ceiled stable called The Samovar. From thence they visited Peg's Pantry, the Jade Buddha, and Jean's Dye Pot.

But the main excitement was discovered in a cellar named the Boiling Kettle. On rough wooden benches round the walls (which were of stone) sat crowds of men and women, mostly young and good-looking. Coffee and liquid refreshment were in front of them, in pewter pots on trestle tables. Enormous candles, each carved into odd shapes by the hands of artistic visitors, dripped tallow tears, and cast queer, flickering shadows everywhere.

A short-haired girl in an absurd batik "djibbah," with a long-haired poet in a velvet jacket bending over her, was hammering out a tune on a piano.

"There ain't no flies on Moses! An' it ain't gwine ter rain no mo'.

Some young fellows joined gaily in the chorus.

Philip and Mary crossed the uneven floor, and found two seats at a trestle table, facing each other. Philip, with his back to the room, swung around a little, so that he could see something.

A smocked young man was reading Freud. An open book of Nietzche lay close by, upon the table. A girl with horn-rimmed goggles was carving her initials on said table, being very busy over it

Philip ordered a couple of coffees, and surveyed the scene. Mary, too, looked about her with interested eyes.

There were cobwebs on the cellar-windows, and a broken pane had a red rag stuffed in it.

"Symbol of Freedom," said Philip, with a smile.

"But they all look quite well-off, and so—respectable!" protested Mary, puzzled.

"Whatever you do, don't call them that!" her escort chided her, still smiling. "To be called 'respectable' is the final insult here, I can assure you." Then he added, whimsically: "Doesn't it take you back to childhood days? Not one of them"—he looked round the audience again—"have properly grown up, I'll wager."

Peter, the smocked silhouette cutter, put down his book of Freud, and surveyed Mary with professional interest. When she turned her head she had a pretty profile, and one must pick up clients everywhere.

Olivette, the lovely and langorous cigarette-girl, sold a box to Philip, and undulated onwards on her way.

But it was the queer behavior of a handsome boy of about one-and-twenty, well-dressed, who looked as if he might be a college youth on a vacation, that arrested Mary's eye, and made her feel extremely nervous.

He sat on the other side of the table, next to Philip, but the latter. having turned around a little, had his back to him. With long, trembling fingers, the boy incessantly plucked his own coat sleeves. His eyes were glittering oddly. His lips twisted and untwisted in unlovely smiles. And always he kept those brilliant sunken, slightly bloodshot eyes on Mary Forrest.

He leaned forward once and muttered:

"Where the hell've I seen you before?"

Mary drew back, looking towards Philip for assistance. But Philip's head was turned the other way.

Was the boy drunk? He looked so dazed. And yet——

He rose, standing behind Philip's chair, and with the index finger of his right hand mysteriously beckoned Mary. "Come!"

She was alarmed. Philip swung round and saw him.

"Take no notice," he said, sotto voice, knowing the queer customers that blow in and out of the village haunts.

The boy kept standing there, however. Then he moved forward, squeezing in determined fashion into the seat beside the girl.

Philip leaped up immediately.

"Get out at once!"

The boy's eyes glittered, and his lower jaw thrust out.

"No. You leave me 'lone." He turned to Mary, who was trying to draw away from him, although the space was too confined. She was white with terror.

Philip's hands shot out, and gripped the boy's wrists in a vice of steel, wrenching him sharply to his feet, and then jerking him forward, away from the table towards the center of the room.

"I'll kill you," hissed the youth, fumbling in his pockets. "My knife—where is my knife?"

Trembling in every limb, and terrified for Philip's safety, Mary had sprung to her feet.

"He's crazy with dope," said the girl with the goggles, looking up from her carving coolly.

There was a flash of steel, and then a clatter, as the knife—impelled downwards by a dextrous blow from Philip—fell to the stone floor.

The manager of the Boiling Kettle and another man came forward and put the youth outside.

Philip seated himself again, and nodded reassuringly to Mary.

"Finish your coffee, and we'll get away from here. Don't worry. It was nothing."

The manager was apologetic.

"Queer chap! They say he takes cocaine."

"Snow-birds, we call 'em," volunteered the girl in the horn-rimmed glasses lackadaisically.

The scene had caused but little stir. Perhaps the denizens of the Boiling Kettle were inured to such.

Mary was glad, yet at the same time just a little fearful, when—the coffee finished—she and her escort found themselves under the blue sky again. Would the "snow-bird" be waiting for revenge on Philip? He was nowhere to be seen.

In quiet side-streets they saw many a figure silhoutted against studio windows, sculpturing, writing, working at easels.

"There are quite a few who do take their work seriously, though heaps of folks only live in the village to racket round and break conventions," Philip said. "It's the same in the Quartier Latin and in Chelsea on the other side of the Atlantic. Human nature's pretty much the same. The real and the fake, the hookum and the genuine article, side by side."

They dropped into the quaintest little theatre, where, on a twelve-foot stage, a Parisian show was being given. The audience sat on wooden benches. Some of the "turns" were excellent, though just a little startling.

"Let's finish up in The Pirate's Den, and then go home," suggested Philip.

As they walked on the cobbled pavements underneath the skeleton framework of the elevated railway, Mary looked upwards. She gave a little cry.

"Oh, look! The trestles are on fire!"

It was quite true. Tongues of red flame were curling round a couple of the wooden planks.

"We must give the alarm," said Philip quickly. "Trains are due to pass over every couple of minutes, and they easily catch fire."

No policeman was in sight, but a red-painted pillar topped by its glass-fronted "fire alarm" box was only fifty yards along the street. Philip ran to it, snatched the small hammer that hangs on its chain, broke through the glass and gave the signal. Within a very short space of time, the brigades were there in force and the blaze extinguished.

Not wishing publicity in the matter, Philip took Mary off.

"Have you seen sufficient of Greenwich Village now?" he asked with a smile. "You've eaten among the goldfishes, parrots and canaries, you've met a real live dope-fiend, and you've seen an honest-to-goodness fire! Is that enough?"

"Oh, do let's drop into the Pirate's Den, just as a finish-up," begged the young girl, loath to bring the evening—even though, in bits, it had been rather "creepy"—to an end.

"All right. You shall hear the brigands howling beneath the buccaneering beams!"

So into the Pirate's Den they went.

And the first thing that caught their gaze was not the pirates, but the vision of Luella Loder, seated in a comfy corner, with John Rogers' arm about her waist!

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to a druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

From Maine to California, from Wisconsin to Texas, and from Nebraska to Florida letters are received every day from grateful women who say the Vegetable Compound has helped to restore their health.

Eczema on Hands For Nine Years Cuticura Healed

"About nine years ago eczema started breaking out on my hands and fingers in a rash. It itched badly and when I scratched it, it would burn and eruptions formed. When I put my hands in water it was worse. At night I could not rest or sleep on account of it. The trouble lasted about nine years.

"I tried almost everything I could think of without any benefit. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time I could see that my hands were better. I continued using them and in about two months I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. J. Baker, 539-18th Ave. A, Moline, Ill.

Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum to promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health; the Soap to cleanse and purify, Ointment to soothe and heal and Talcum to powder.

SPORT SLATE NOW CLEARED FOR WORLD SERIES TO START SOON

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—After having been thoroughly washed by the Tunney-Dempsey fight, the decks were being cleared today for baseball as the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees began to prepare for the 1926 world series.

Boxing, golf and tennis gave way and infant football lacked the voice to draw the attention of the public.

Both teams started special training with scouts advising Rogers Hornsby and Miller Huggins about the weaknesses—if any—of their opponents and the business staff of the two clubs was knee-deep in applications for tickets.

The St. Louis officials have several days advantage over the New York office staff as the Yanks refused to accept an application or a check until the American League pennant had been won mathematically, finally and officially.

New York didn't have a civic demonstration when the Yanks won the pennant, like St. Louis threw for the Cardinals. The rather blase way in which the Yanks were accepted as victors was due primarily to the fact that world series games are nothing of a novelty here and New York has exhausted all her hysterics on Gertrude Ederle, Millie Corson and Gene Tunney.

Interest always can be shown by ticket sales and Ed Barrow said he had been flooded with enough advance application since mid-season that he felt reasonably sure of a sell-out.

This is no idle hope for the Yanks as with a good break in the weather two Saturday and two Sunday games will be played in New York and the Yankees Stadium is a huge thing.

Most of the experts are lining up behind the Cards but after the terrible socking the experts took on the fight, the tennis and golf championships and other events, it may mean that the Yanks are sure to win.

The Cards are favored chiefly because they are a younger, faster and better balanced club with the fire of ambition. The Yanks are accustomed to pennants; the Cards never have been in a world's series. The Cards have more good pitchers than the Yanks, and the American League Champs with a bad flop in late season that might have caused them to lose the pennant in another week, showed signs of being stale.

world series playing, may be better money players but the Cards certainly showed no inclination to curl up when they were fighting off the attack of the Reds and Pirates.

~~NORTH WEST OF THE~~ OHIO

CINCINNATI:

PRINTED BY W. MAXWELL.

Wiliam Maxwell, former Greene Countian, whose grave lies in Beavercreek Twp., printe the first laws of the old Northwest Territory comprising what is now Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, when a printing press was finally brought through the wilderness in 1796 and set up in the village of Cincinnati.

The title page of this first printed book published for the vast territory north of the Ohio River appears above.

Prior to 1796 Governor St. Clair made the pioneers secure under law by having the laws written in longhand, each copy being certified by himself.

Governor St. Clair and his two judges had spent the sixty-nine days from May 29 to August 5, 1795, under the legislative power granted them by the ordinance of 1787, adapting laws then operative in other parts of the union to the needs of the new Territory, so that the printed laws should be just and pertinent.

William Maxwell then used the press of his "Centinel of the North West Territory" a paper "open to all parties—influenced by none" to run off the book. In many another pioneer community also, the press of the first newspaper was used to print the first book of laws.

The title page here reproduced is from the copy in the Harvard Law School Library, at Cambridge, Mass., one of few in existence. It is a pocket-size volume, six by seven and one-fourth inches of 225 pages, preserved unbound in one-half morocco case.

The grave of William Maxwell, pioneer printer of this territory, who started the trail from Dayton to Xenia, after leaving Cincinnati, was found through the efforts of Catherine Greene Chapter, D. A. R., several months ago.

WANTS EXECUTION BUT WHO'LL BE THE VICTIM

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—A woman with lofty demeanor strutted up to the gates of Ohio Penitentiary.

"What is it for you, ma'am?" asked one of the prisoner trusties who takes the names of visitors.

"Why, I want to see Mr. So-and-So, and while I'm waiting for you to get him, I want to go through the penitentiary, watch the prisoners eat, watch them work and see an electrocution."

The trusty nearly fell dead. But, he never cracked a smile. Instead, he imparted the woman's wishes to William Payne, secretary to Warden Thomas.

After Payne explained that electrocutions, for instance, were not held everytime a visitor wanted to see one, the woman was disappointed. Of all her requests she was granted one—that of seeing the man she wanted to see.

FUTURE OF BIRD DOG IN ENGLAND GLOOMY AMERICAN SPORTS MEN SAY IN CHICAGO

By BERT M. DEMBY

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The future of the bird dog in England seems a gloomy one, in the opinions of several American sportsmen who have returned from attending the field trials in the moors of Scotland and Wales.

According to these opinions the slow dogs with the narrow range and little initiative to hunt birds, have taken the place of the old time fast ranging setters and pointers of the "good old days in Dogdom."

The interest in the setter and pointer field trials grows less each year according to the reports. At the same time the spaniel trials are growing in interest and threaten to usurp all the glory of the wide ranging dogs.

Another thing brought out is that several of the European owners of game preserves have grown so perfect in the art of raising birds in their natural habitat that the pointers are really no longer needed.

This, the sportsmen say, has given rise to the development of the springer spaniel, the dog that keeps always within ranging distance and gun shot of the birds and does his own flushing for the hunters.

As is commonly known, in the trials in this country the best grounds do not furnish enough birds to permit a loafing dog to even get near to winning a place in the trials.

It is up to American dogs to get off from their hunters, sometimes as far as 600 yards and to do their own finding of the game.

In the European trials there are so many birds that the judges require the dogs to keep within a hundred yards of the hunters.

That means that there are too many birds in the course for the dogs to show their real worth. It also means that the spaniel with his springing is more needed over there than the pointer and setter.

That probably accounts for the rapid development of him.

At any rate the initiative of the American setter and pointer class is not required in Europe according to the opinion.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

CLARENCE DARROW

Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer, man of letters and America's foremost "reformer against reform" cracked another idol when speaking of his favorite hobby. He said he didn't have one and hoped that he never would have such a thing.

And as for playing golf or tennis Mr. Darrow lit a cigarette and smiled contemptuously. He avowed he could see no real reason for a man admittedly young no longer tiring himself out on a golf course when he had a good light, an easy chair and an interesting book on science available.

Darrow added that he had never taken a great deal of exercise but had retained his health in spite of it, or perhaps—his eyes twinkled—"because of it."

Knickers? Yes-But Spare Us "Shorts" And Derbies

AL JOLSON IN "SHORTS" AT LOS ANGELES COUNTRY CLUB

Fall styles for men may be revolutionary to say the least and the least said the better for the sad part of it is that similar styles to the fall fashions in Scotland may prevail in the United. States if rumors are to be believed.

Can you imagine—short coats flapping loosely from the shoulders, short, wide trousers flapping just as loosely several inches above the shoe tops, and derbies with low crowns and curving brims? These are the chic things for autumn street wear in Scotland.

It all sounds fairly reasonable except the hat. These things are what the well-dressed men may wear in Xenia this fall. But the hat. Derbies have not been able to stage much of a comeback in this country, and local merchants say that it seems hardly likely that they will this year.

Be that as it may, trouser bottoms hovering uncertainly above a three-inch expanse of sock, is another blow, which, it is hoped, will never fall.

Wide trousers, men agree, are all right, but they should be long as well as wide. The Englishman wears his trousers short anyway, but the American likes his trousers close to the ground. It is said they even pick out Americans on the Continent by this characteristic of their dress,—as well as by well known characteristics of other kinds.

These Scottish tailors, not quite satisfied with such predictions in regard to street clothes, go a step further and set what they think will be the mode in sport garb. "Shorts" will be the thing in trousers, and will reach half-way to the knee. The rest of the limb —or that portion below the knee —will be clad in fancy golf hose and heavy shoes. Instead of neckties, a colored scarf will be looped once in front and tucked into the shirt front.

"Yes", says the Xenia man at this final blow, "MAYBE it will be."

Men's fashions have always been less flexible than women's, and it is unlikely that the male will give up to these things without a struggle. Knickers were established in his favor only after a real battle. The wrist watch, the bright necktie, and the wide trouser had similar experiences.

A man seems curiously fond of sticking to his plain blues and greys in conservatively cut suits and letting the fads attack the feminine members of the family, or possibly it is because a man really has a secret passion for fancy raiment. which is only suppressed because of the conventions.

Wrote to Girls

Oliver Dillon, arrested in New York, was accused of sending scurrilous letters to thousands of girls in all parts of the country.

SYSTEM OF DISEASE PREVENTION SAVES ISLANDERS' HEALTH

By E. R. STITT
Surgeon General U. S. Navy
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute
(Written for United Press)

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—St. Thomas, one of the West Indies, is a small island thirty-three square miles in area, having a population of slightly over 10,000. Shortly after its purchase in 1917, officers of the Naval Medical Corps were placed in charge of its health administration and they immediately put into force a system of disease prevention.

Intestinal disease, as most directly affecting mortality rates, were attacked first. Proper sewage disposal was instituted; water supplies protected; food substances screened; places favoring the breeding of flies cleaned up, and typhoid vaccination made universal.

These undertakings were completed in 1918. Since that time there have been no cases of typhoid reported; and the general death rate for diseases of the alimentary tract which for the ten year period prior to our occupation amounted to 359 per 100,000 for the year 1919 was 61.

The mosquito-borne disease, malaria, dengue and filariasis, which also were causing much sickness, and economic disability, were combatted by eradicating the insect carrier, and—in the case of malaria—by treating the population so thoroughly that there should remain no reservoir of the disease for its propogation. These diseases continue to be a problem only in the more remote rural districts.

Smallpox has been extirpated by repeated vaccination. The spread of leprosy has been arrested by effective segregation in a colony where modern methods of treatment are employed. Yaws has been made rare through early sterilization of infected persons by arsphenamine; veneral infections, previously all but universal, have been curtailed; and, although at one time the streets, jails, and asylums were thronged with pellagrins, changing dietary habits of the people brought about the practical disappearance of pellagra in two years.

The infant mortality was appalling, one-third of all babies born dying within the year. A school for the training of native nurses to be instructors in hygiene among their people, maternity and baby clinics, visiting nurses and an annual baby-show combined, have reduced the former mortality 28 per cent—and the lowering is still progressing.

A "health record" of every individual has been opened. While the record was originally adopted to serve as a medical history, the collection has proved to be of inestimable value as a source of data for clinical and epidemiological studies. St. Thomas is unique in being the only political unit in the world having such a system.

The experiment here reported, although conducted on a tropical island, indicates that by the application in our country of measures that are practicable, inexpensive and not burdensome, we would be spared something over a quarter of a million deaths a year. What might be saved in ill-health, sickness and suffering and disability can only be surmised.

SALLIES OF FRENCH FASHION EXPERT IN NEW YORK AMAZING

New York is just now being edified by brilliant observations on American life from the pen of a noted French fashion expert, as gay and witty in their way as those of the heroine of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." And New York doesn't know just how to take it.

The new commentor is Marceline d'Alroy, authority on Parisian fashions. An article by her in October McClure's illustrates the kind of epigrams and comments that have set New York wondering about itself.:

"These successful American men may know how to make good but they certainly don't know how to make love."

"New York is a miracle. There are such crowds of good looking men in it. But I wish some would wear the mustache so that they do not look so all alike."

"Don't they know that some times a woman likes to seek for the lips beneath the mustache in the same way that men used to look for silk ankles beneath long skirts."

"The girdle is a moral support and garters help to keep the weak women straight."

"From lingerie to love is a very little step. But cheap lingerie suggests not a delicate deliberate step—merely a common slip."

"They say that beneath the skin all women are alike, but beneath our clothes we are all different."

"I have always felt that a man who wears a white tie in the day time is not to be trusted with a pretty woman."

Nash entirely encases the front brake shoes which are of die cast aluminum. And thus keeps out all water and dirt from the mechanism. Note extremely large brake drum shown at left.

The Simplest and Most Efficient 4 Wheel Brakes
Standard Equipment—No Extra Cost
Another vital Nash mechanical superiority is the special Nash 4-wheel brake system—the safest, simplest and most efficient type known to the industry.
Fully equalized to right and left, front and rear, these brakes banish entirely the dangerous swerving characteristic of partially equalized brakes.
They are of unique simplicity in design, having fewer points requiring lubrication than any other mechanical brake system.
Their instant, powerful, but velvety ease-ful pressure is scientifically distributed, 60% to the rear and 40% to the front.
The sixteen new Nash models now on display range in price from $865 to $2090 f. o. b. factory.

New Nash Features
7-bearing crankshaft motor—world's smoothest type—powers all new Nash models.
New-type crankcase "breather" which prevents crankcase dilution.
New double beam headlights with steering wheel control.
Rich new body finish colors.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY AND HEARING FIXED

Thomas B. Lovett, 213 Montgomery St., Dayton, pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving a car while intoxicated before Probate Court Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday morning as the anti-climax of an auto collision on the Dayton and Xenia Pike at Zimmerman Saturday afternoon in which Mrs. Henry Norckauer, 136 Hill St., Xenia, sustained a triple fracture of the right arm and her daughter, Miss Dorothy, minor injuries.

Date for Lovett's hearing before Judge Wright was set for October 6. Bond was fixed at $500.

Mrs. Norckauer, besides the fractured arm, sustained lesser cuts and bruises, while her daughter, driver of the car, received a sprained wrist and knee, cuts and bruises. Lovett was also slightly hurt.

Lovett, driving a coupe toward Xenia, is blamed for the accident as it is alleged he caused a headon collision by traveling on the wrong side of the highway.

HOTEL PROPERTY TO BE SOLD BY SHERIFF

All furniture, fixtures, accessories, equipment and restaurant supplies of the Atlas Hotel, S. Detroit St., will be sold at sheriff's sale at the hotel, Friday, October 8, at 2 o'clock, following an order of Common Pleas Court in a legal action in which William H. Kane, is plaintiff, it is announced.

Walter Dorrien, owner and manager of the hotel, defendant in the action, announces that he will retain the ownership of the hostelry.

The hotel is closed temporarily while preparations for the sale are being made but Mr. Dorrien announces he will re-open the establishment in about ten days.

M'KINLEY P. T. A. TO CONDUCT DRIVE

Friday, October 1, was set aside as "McKinley School Day" when the president and membership committee of McKinley P. T. A. met at the school Monday afternoon and laid plans for a membership drive on that date.

A leader with two assistants was appointed in each room. The membership committee will work on honorary memberships on that date. A goal of 100 paid members was set by the membership chairman, Mrs. Richard McClellan. A membership fee of fifty cents is assessed.

WHAT DOES IT MORTAR?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — President Coolidge shook hands with 200 undertakers today, but he doesn't know it yet.

As the undertakers, or morticians, as they call themselves, entered the executive office the president turned to a secret service operative and asked:

"What defegation is this?"

The attache turned to Everett Sanders, the president's secretary.

"Morticians," Sanders said.

The Secret Service man thought this over and turning to the president, whispered.

"These are bricklayers, Mr. President."

THOMAS C. JAMES DIES HERE MONDAY

Thomas C. James, 68, retired grocer and lifelong resident of Greene County, passed away at his home on E. Market St., Monday evening at 9:40 o'clock. Death followed an illness of two weeks, due to neuralgia of the heart. Mr. James had been failing in health for the past five months.

He was engaged in the grocery business for twenty-five years, retiring just recently, his two sons, Ralph and Byford taking over the business. Previous to entering the grocery business he traveled for nineteen years for Underwood-Calvary Confectioners, and J. K. McIntire, wholesale grocer, Dayton.

His wife preceded him in death seven years. He is survived by three sons and one daughter, Mrs. Andrew Grapevine, Omak, Wash.; Paul, at Yellow Springs; Ralph and Byford of Xenia. Four sisters and two brothers also survive: Mrs. Sam Carey, the Misses Jennie and Lorena James and Morris James, at Wilmington; Mrs. Lewis Buell, Xenia, and Enoch James, Dayton.

Mr. James was a member of the First Reformed Church, Xenia. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Reformed Church. Friends may call at the home of Ralph and Byford James, Fairground Road, Wednesday evening.

Individuality and Memorials

Where is the man who would design his new home exactly like that of his neighbor next door?
Who will purchase a suit of the same color and style being worn by a friend?
Isn't it true that nearly everyone has a natural instinct for individuality? This is reflected in every home and about the person of those with discriminating taste. Then why erect a Memorial that is commonplace? Why "copy" that which has already been erected by someone else? Most assuredly you will better appreciate your Memorial or even a Marker if it is not commonplace.

Our designing service has this thought uppermost at all times and is continually creating original designs. Our display, the largest in Ohio, is made up of beautiful creations of Art that are individual. Consult us and we will help you plan something that will be the most fitting for your Cemetery lot.

HAT TO MATCH EVERY NECKTIE IS STYLE DICTATE TO XENIA MEN THIS AUTUMN

The average well-dressed Englishman is reputed to possess eleven pairs of shoes.

The well-dressed Xenian will soon find himself forced to have as many soft hats, if the fad for colored felts takes.

For it is obvious, local merchants say, that a brown suit and a lavender hat become no man; nor would one of those fawn colored with more than a dash of orange, make a pleasant combination with an oxford gray topcoat.

Therefore, for that reason it will probably eventuate that only the wealthy and venturesome will indulge themselves in this well-meaning appreciation of colors.

It has long been admitted that there is little enough color in the sombre garments of the male—except of course, for neckties, and socks, and more recently, shirts—but it is extremely doubtful that men will endorse the varied colors in headgear, according to the concensus of opinion.

This fall, it is indicated in displays, the older man need not consider investing in anything but the gray fedoras or derby, or else he must be extremely young looking for his age to follow the dictates of fashion for youths.

Merchants argue that the college student may be dashing but he can never attain to the distinguished appearance of an older man correctly garbed in gray or dark blue.

The younger men this fall will sport about in outlandish stripes or spots.

Fashions this fall in clothes are slowly coming around to the more conservative type as displays of suits in Xenia lean toward the gray colors and mixtures of the different shades of brown once more.

STUDEBAKER PRICE CUT MADE POSSIBLE BY IMMENSE SALES

Price cuts on Studebaker Cars, effective September 27, ranging from $35 to $205, have been announced by A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation of America. Models affected and amount of reduction on each are: Big Six Club Coupe, $205; Big Six Custom Brougham, $200; Standard Six Sport Roadster, $80; and Standard Six Country Club Coupe, $35.

In making the announcement, President Erskine pointed out that the prices established in July on the Custom Sedans were made in anticipation of an increased volume of sales. The response has more than met expectations, according to Mr. Erskine, for sales on Sedans since August 1, 1926, have been more than double the best previous similar period. Compared with the same period of 1925 sales have been four times greater.

The $200 reduction on the Big Six Custom Brougham brings this car down to $1785, the lowest price ever placed on a Big Six four-door enclosed car. According to President Erskine, the cut in the price of this model, as with others reduced, is made in order to give purchasers, immediately, the benefit of economies which will result from increased production.

More than double the number of Studebaker Sedans were sold during the first thirty days of the Custom Sedan display than in any previous month in Studebaker history, according to a report received from the factory by The Greene County Hardware Co., local dealers.

CANCER CAUSE IS STILL UNKNOWN

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 28—Exact knowledge as to the cause of cancer is still being sought without results according to the most distinguished cancer research authorities of the world.

Dr. Archibald Leitch of London spoke at the Hopkins University today on "Cancer and chronic irritation." He expressed the view that some elements in addition to chronic irritation was necessary to the production of cancer.

He suggested that this additional element might be purely chemical and not an organism. He discussed cancers found among the workers in certain industries.

Dr. Ferdinand Blumenthal, professor of medicine at the University of Berlin advanced the theory that some forms of cancer are caused by parasitic organisms.

HURRICANE SURVIVORS WRITE INTERESTINGLY OF RESULTS

Graphic accounts of the hurricane that spelled destruction in Florida, are included in letters received by relatives from John and E. S. Davidson, former Xenians, who are located at Miami and West Palm Beach, respectively.

John Davidson's letter says: "This is just a word to prove that we're still here and unhurt. We had to get out of the house in the dark, going out to the garage where we sat in the car. We wired the garage doors to the car and so kept them from blowing off. We sat there until about noon the next day and thanked God we were alive. The dead are still being found buried in kelp and debris. I think many were lost trying to escape from their houses during the lull which was the dead centre of the hurricane. The worst followed that lull. Our house, I believe, stood upon the only strip of the island that was not under water and it, the water, was just in front of us, at the edge of the yard and at our rear.

"Just now we are without city water. Sea water from the bay is pumped into the mains for fire protection and sewage use and it smells to heaven. Thus far we have been able to buy distilled water but it is more and more difficult to get and we are making preparations to catch rainwater. None of us have had a bath, except from a basin. Water is too precious. But I think we'll try the ocean just to get wet, although the dead are still being found along shore. The children and I ran into one that was just being taken out of the kelp yesterday—not so pleasant.

"Have fixed one corner of the house to live in,—off from the part where the roof is gone—in the "tower" section.

"Otherwise we are all right. Enough food and some ice. Large ships have been set up—or over on shore. A big barge is located (not crosswise, fortunately) in the center of the Venetian causeway between us and the mainland. Smaller boats, like tugs, fishing boats and the like are washed across streets and into buildings. Mike was at the Wofford Hotel when coping fell through the skylight, killing a man four or five feet away. Fortunately, he had a supply of cash and he and his car have mighty near, or quite, saved our lives—for we are far out from supply sources and it was our refuge in the storm."

E. S. Davidson's letter says in part: * * * "Hollywood, Miami, Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale are a wreck. I think it safe to say the there isn't a building of any description that didn't suffer some loss. The streets and sidewalks are covered four and five feet deep with sand and debris of every kind and description. Some of the most beautiful and costly homes are crumbled like an egg shell. West Palm Beach is taking care of hundreds of refuges, and everybody is sewing and doing his bit to help relieve their suffering. Typhoid is breaking out in some of the towns and they say the stench is awful. Waves and wind picked up cement sidewalks and broke the paved streets and tossed the broken pieces about like bits of paper. Our loss is very small."

The cenveition theme is "Educational Significance of the Parent-Teacher Movement." The first session will be held Wednesday, starting at 9 a. m., with meeting of the state board of managers at the Hotel Lafayette. After the registration and reception of delegates and officers, exhibits, pageants, motion pictures, banquets and addresses will attract the delegates.

Welcoming addresses will be made by Hon. J. W. Gray, mayor of Marietta; B. P. Skinner, superintendent of Marietta schools and Mrs. Frank Mautz, president, Marietta P. T. A., Mrs. C. E. Kendel, state president, will respond and give the membership banner.

Business sessions will begin Thursday, with reports from various departments. Professor J. E. Turner, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston will speak on "Health Education" in the evening and other important addresses will be made. Conclusion of reports and elections of officers will take place Friday. Luncheons and banquets will intersperse the program and an auto drive around historic Marietta followed by a tea at the home of Mrs. Edwin B. Strecker, Harmar Hill, will feature the convention.

Convention headquarters will be at the First Congregational Church.

REGISTRATION LOW

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Registration at Ohio University today was 5,944, which was slightly lower than the total for the same period in 1925. However, when enrollment has been completed, it is thought the total will be over the 9,000 mark.

STAR DEALER TELLS ABOUT TIRE SAVING BY CAREFUL DRIVING

The tire bill is one of the heaviest tolls to which the automobile owner is subjected.

Tire life may be lengthened and the tire bill materially reduced by the observance of certain simple precautions involving little labor.

The importance of tire conservation has been made an important economic issue by the increased price for raw rubber.

Some hints for tire conservation given by Fred Johnston, local Star dealer follow:

Drive carefully over rough spots. Stone bruises result from careless driving over uneven surfaces and stone bruises destroy tires.

Drive at moderate speeds. Fast driving heats tires and heated tires wear quickly.

Above all things, keep your tires inflated to the pressure recommended by the manufacturer. Underinflation is most destructive to tires.

Inspect tires at least once a week. A tire gauge that indicates air pressure is the wisest investment an automobile owner can

LABOR PLEASED BY FIVE-DAY WEEK PLAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—The new five day week policy instituted by Henry Ford is considered by the American Federation of Labor as another victory in its effort to reduce the hours of labor, William Green, president of the Labor organization said today.

Green said Ford's new policy would have a "moral effect" on other large industries but he refused to predict that it would result in a general slashing in working hours.

MOTORCYCLIST SERIOUSLY INJURED

Three Injured Victims May Die and Increase Toll—Lehigh Road Throws Blame On Jersey Line

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 28.—An investigation was to be opened here today by F. Bohney, chief of the accident division of the state public service commission to fix the blame for the wreck of the Jersey Railroad's Scranton flyer and Lehigh Limited in which eight persons were killed and about forty injured. Three of the injured persons, one an eleven year old girl, Ann Valventage, of Broadbrook, Mass., were in a serious condition in St. Lukes Hospital. The others were Dr. M. S. Kleckner, of Allentown, Pa. ,and Mrs. Elizabeth Mitchau, of Toronto, Ont.

Lehigh officials issued a statement last night in which they said the signals were set against the engineer of the train of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

TAKE THREE DAYS TO REACH MINERS

ENTOMBED MEN MUST WAIT WHILE RESCUE CREWS BORE SHAFTS

Tapping Indicates Trapped Men Are Still Alive

IRONWOOD, Mich, Sept. 28. — The entombed miners who since last Friday have been trapped in the Pabst mine here must wait three days at least before rescuers are able to reach their level, half a mile below the surface, it was announced here today. Unless unexpected means of access to the miners are discovered, it will take three solid days of digging to get to the miners level it was said at rescue headquarters.

Belief that the miners are still alive was voiced when Alfred Moki, a rescue worker wormed his way 150 feet down the shaft and with a rope tied to his waist wriggled past the shaft supports and boulders until he could tap an iron pipe leading to the eighth level of the mine where the men are believed gathered.

He tapped on the pipe and was answered by a success of eight taps. Rescue leaders interpreted this to mean that the men are on the eighth level. He said he could hear faint sound of the men and believed they were digging.

It was believed early today that the miners have plenty of light for. a mine foreman recalled that he had left a five gallon can of kerosene on the eighth level just before the cave in.

Four plans of rescue are being worked on:

Workers are digging and blasting through the main shaft while another crew has obtained access to the 13th level through adjoining shafts and are tunneling upward. Another group is drilling a three inch hole to the eighth level through which they hope to communicate with the miners,, they also hope to pass food tablets down this tube to the trapped men. The fourth group is clearing up the cave in at the 21st level.

Rescue work is proceeding slowly because the shafts of the mine must be walled up after each excavation to prevent another cave in.

The group in the 13th level estimated that they were less than 300 feet from the prisoners this morning.

Mine officials report that although the prisoners are naturally undergoing hardships, their prison is spacious enough to hold all of them without discomfort, that there are plenty of air pockets handy and that water undoubtedly seeps through to allay their thirst.

BODIES OF OHIO RIVER VICTIMS RECOVERED FAR DOWN STREAM

Victims Taken From Water At Point Pleasant, W. Va.—Lost Their Lives When Skiff Capsized

POMEROY, O., Sept. 28.—Recovery of the bodies of two of five persons drowned in the Ohio River at Mason City, W. Va., across the river from here was made at Point Pleasant, W. Va., sixteen miles down stream.

One was identified as Mrs. A. C. Foulk and the other body was believed to be either Mrs. John Meier or Mrs. Robert Hunnell.

The five were drowned when a skiff in which they were being ferried across the river to their homes here capsized and went under a ferry, tied up at Mason City.

Those drowned were: Mrs. A. C. Foulk, Mrs. John Meier, Mrs. Robert Hunnell, and Mrs. Will Spannagel and her seven months old baby.

OLD TOWN RESIDENT IN HOSPITAL AFTER COLLISION ON PIKE

Clarence Swadener May Die—Auto Driver Sought By Police

Delirious and suffering from a concussion of the brain, a possible fractured skull and severe lacerations on the right leg and about the face and body, Clarence Swadener, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Swadener, Old Town, is in Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, where physicians fear he may die as a result of a collision between his motorcycle and a roadster near Alpha on the Dayton and Xenia Pike at 7:30 p. m. Monday.

Swadener was en route to Dayton where he has been employed since last May, on the night shift at the Delco Co. plant, when his motorcycle was struck head-on by a roadster traveling in the opposite direction.

Hospital physicians say he has not regained consciousness and entertain little hope for his recovery.

Dayton police are seeking to locate and identify the driver of the automobile, who is said to have disappeared shortly after the accident, abandoning his machine. Witnesses are reported to have obtained the number of the license plates and Sheriff Morris Sharp expects to also make an investigation.

The accident occurred in front of the residence of Charles Johannes, who was the first to arrive on the scene. Swadener was taken into his house and attended by Dr. George W. Anderson, Alpha. After receiving first aid treatment, he was removed to the Dayton hospital in the ambulance of Ora G. Marker, N. Main St., Dayton.

Swadener is said to have been found unconscious on the pike in the rear of the roadster. It is the theory the youth was hurled entirely over the machine.

The driver of the machine is reported to have told Johannes before disappearing that Swadener was driving without lights. Other witnesses are said to place the responsibility upon the driver whose car, it is said, was being driven without lights.

Identity of the injured cyclist was not established until early Tuesday morning by Dr. Anderson. Swadener has several fingers missing from his right hand and this fact is believed to have aided in tracing him.

His parents were informed of the accident by Dr. Anderson Tuesday morning and immediately left for Miami Valley Hospital to learn the extent of his injuries.

DEMOCRATIC SEERS WEAR WORRIED LOOK OVER M'ADOO ATTACK

Fear Issues Which Split Party in 1924 May Be Revived

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—With one eye on New York and the other on California, Democratic seers here today wore a worried look over recent developments forecasting resumption of the harrowing Smith-McAdoo, wet-dry and Klan-Anti-Klan feud.

Not a Democratic leader in town could be found to comment today for publication upon the statement of William G. McAdoo that Gov. Al Smith's Democracy in New York and Governor Ritchie's in Maryland are attempting nullification of the constitution in their fight for what they call state rights.

Privately, however, the view was expressed that this first national political statement from McAdoo since he and Smith locked horns in Madison Square Garden in 1924 was notice that he was still in the political arena.

It confirmed the opinion aroused when candidates were tagged with the McAdoo label in the California primary and when McAdoo men made a stand in the Democratic California convention.

Up to that time there had been little mention of the faction and McAdoo took no ostensible part in the politics of the party.

Even then politicians here felt that McAdoo was making no open bid to resume leadership of the faction in the party. But the public speech against Smith and Ritchie delivered before the Los Angeles Women's Christian Temperance Union left no other interpretation.

Coincidentally the Smith group is staging a state convention at Syracuse which has impressed Democrats here as being a Smith rally. The state platform adopted by the convention will be scrutinized by National Democrats who will seek in it a statement of the platform upon which they expect Smith to make a bid for the presidential nomination in 1928.

Indications are that both sides in the old Klan fight are gathering strength for any storm that is to develop. Although McAdoo has been out of the picture personally until the last few days, the southern delegations which gave him strength in the last convention have been carrying on the fight for policies he represented. The "Smith" issue was raised in several Southern Democratic primaries.

THREE CASES FACE SUPREME COURT AS MEETS ON TUESDAY

Appeal In Damage Suit First Case Facing Judges

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Three cases were scheduled for hearing as the Ohio supreme court reconvened today for the fall term after having been in recess since July 9.

Cases pending in the court included 107 general document cases and 160 motion cases.

The first case scheduled to be heard at this term is the appeal of William J. Bowman of Cincinnati in his $50,000 damage suit against William Lemon. Bowman sued to recover for injuries received when assaulted and beaten by two men whom he alleged were hired by Lemon.

The appeal of David Atkins, negro convicted of killing Harry A. Malone, railroad detective near Justus, in August, 1925 is on the calandar the first day. Atkins claimed self-defense but was sentenced to be electrocuted.

The third suit is a mandamus brought by Jacob Zettler, Jr., of Columbus, to compel the state tax commission to assess property owned by Fraternal organizations and money and bonds owned by financial institutions.

TRUDIE VISITING IN OHIO CAPITAL

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English channel, will be Columbus' guest today.

Miss Ederle will arrive this afternoon at 3 o'clock and will be met by a committee headed by Mayor James J. Thomas and representatives of civic and commercial organizations.

She will lead a parade, escorted by a band and a squadron of police from Union Station to the Neil House.

The swimming star will appear personally at 8:30 tonight in Memorial Hall at the Radio show and will broadcast from WAIU studio on Memorial stage at 9:15 eastern standard time.

In addition she will appear twice Wednesday afternoon and twice Wednesday night at the Radio show.

DAMAGES REFUSED

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Alighting from a street car between intersections lost a damage suit for Miss Thelma M. McDermott in common pleas court here.

The Red Top Company who had been sued for $15,170 damages was absolved from blame by a jury after forty minutes deliberation. The street car company had been held blameless.

MELLON HAS FAITH IN PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon believes prohibition is slowly but surely decreasing liquor consumption in the U. S.

Mellon said today bootleg sources of supply are decreasing and that the people are drinking less than ever before. He declared rum smuggling by sea has been virtually stopped ,adding that very little liquor is now coming across the Canadian border,.

Industrial alcohol, he admitted, continues to be the chief source of supply for illicit markets.

FACTORY DAMAGED

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28—Damage estimated at $50,000 was caused today by a fire which damaged the Day Wood-Heel Co., plant here.

The fire originated in the boiler room.

MERTON RE-CALLED AS CHIEF WITNESS IN DAUGHERTY CASE

German To Testify This Time As Defense Witness

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Richard Merton of Frankfort, Germany came back as the chief witness in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial today.

He was called as the first witness for the defense after the state had completed its case against former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

Col. William Rand of the defense questioned Merton as to conversations Merton had with R. E. Williams, assistant to Miller before he applied for return of $7,000,000-000 assets of the American Metal Company. Merton maintained that while Williams gave him worthwhile information he "used my own judgment."

QUIZZ EVANGELIST IN CONSPIRACY SOON

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—Hearing of the charges of conspiracy to defeat justice against Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist and four associates, was expected to produce further sensations here today as District Attorney Keyes led up to the examination of his star witness.

The prosecution seeks to establish that the evangelist's story of abduction into Mexico last May was a fabrication and that she was with Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple, the seat of her cult, at Carmel-By-The-Sea.

MAGISTRATE WAS STRONG FOR LAW

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The stringent Sullivan law designed to keep crooks in this state from possessing firearms, worked to the disadvantage of Aurelio Baldes, an artist when he tried to be a good citizen. He bought a second hand bureau and found a pistol in one of the drawers when it was delivered. He took the pistol to the police station and turned it in. He was promptly arrested for having a revolver.

"I only wanted to be a dutiful citizen," he told Magistrate Glatzmayer in night court last night.

"Sorry, but I'll have to hold you in bail of $25," the magistrate said.

Baldes, being an artist, didn't have $25. The magistrate having done his duty, supplied the bail from his own pocket and Baldes was released.

BELIEVE BODIES OF TWO WASHED AWAY

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 28—River men today believed that flood waters in the Ohio had washed down stream, the bodies of Abraham Weisenthal, wealthy furniture dealer and Mrs. May Stroup, drowned yesterday when the speed boat in which they were riding capsized.

BACK FROM TRIP

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Charles V. Truax, state director of agriculture has returned from a corn borer inspection through Northern Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Canada and expressed alarm concerning the pest. State and federal efforts will be redoubled he said.

WOMAN KILLED

LISBON, O., Sept. 28—Mrs. Charles Heston, 65, of Painesville, was killed and her husband and small grand daughter were painfully injured when their auto overturned near here. The steering wheel broke and the auto upset near the foot of a hill, pinning Mrs. Heston underneath.

FAULKNER FUND HAS PASSED $10,000

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—The James W. Faulkner education memorial will be organized formally by Ohio newspapermen at a meeting here Tuesday, October 5. The fund commemorates the life and public service of the late James W. Faulkner, who was political writer on the Cincinnati Enquirer for more than thirty years.

The fund is said by authorities to be the first in the world established to be a permanent memorial for an active newspaper reporter. Planned shortly after his death three years ago, it opened with a goal set at $10,000. More than that sum has been subscribed and now is waiting action by the organization. The finance committee still is receiving contribution it was announced today by A. E. McKee, associate editor of the Ohio State Journal.

The plan is to use the income from the fund in aiding students complete their education, giving preference to those who plan to enter the newspaper field.

COUNTY BUDGET REQUEST LOWER IS SHOWN; RATE MAY BE REDUCED

Rate Fixing Must Await Finish Of Re-appraisal Work—Increased Valuation Would Cut Tax Rates

Tentative budget for Greene County for the fiscal year beginning January 1, 1927, drawn up and approved by County Commissioners calls for $328,000, an appreciable reduction from the 1926 budget request for the county which totalled $341,900, it was revealed Tuesday.

If the county budget for next year is approved as a whole by the county board of revision and state tax commission there is a possibility the Greene County tax rate for 1927 will be lower than this year. Commissioners are hopeful this will be the case as it was with this end in view the budget was drawn up.

The tentative budget shows a reduction of about $20,000 in the request for the county general fund while the difference is made in the Infirmary fund. Requests in all other funds are practically the same as this year, the largest item listed being $102,000 for the road fund.

Budget requests for 1927 in the various funds follow: County fund, $80,000; Infirmary fund, $22,000; Children's Home fund, $14,000; indigent soldiers' fund, $500; blind relief fund, $2,500;

IMPORTANT RADIO CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE DURING YEAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Since the breakdown in broadcasting regulation forty-five new stations have been licensed, eight stations discontinued, thirty-seven stations changed their wave lengths, thirty-four stations increased their power, four stations changed their call signals and eighteen stations changed ownership, according to the October issue of Stevenson's Bulletin of Radio Broadcasting Stations.

These are more changes than have occurred during any similar period since broadcasting began. They bring the total number of stations to 569 compared to 528 a year ago.

At the present there are 164 stations operating between 280 and 545 meters and 416 between 200 and 280 meters. Three months ago there were 116 stations operating between 280 and 545 meters and 416 between 200 and 280.

Among the important stations increasing their power are the following: KVE, St. Louis, increased its power from 500 to 5,000 watts; WPG, Atlantic City, from 500 to 5,000 watts; WBZ, Springfield, Mass., from 2,000 to 5,000 watts; WWAE, Plainfield, Ill., from 500 to 10,000 watts.

COSHOCTON, O., Sept. 28—Robert F. Thompson was sentenced to be executed January 8 for the murder of Gertrude D'Ostrophe, 10. A motion for a new trial was over-ruled before sentence was pronounced.

ESTATE LARGE

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 28—The will of Dr. Louis Grossman, Rabbi Emeritus who died September 21, filed for probate here today was estimated at $90,000. The bulk of the estate was left to Dr. Charles Aaron, Detroit. Other bequests to charity and for educational funds were made.

FATHER OF VICTORY OBSERVING EIGHTY FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Clemenceau Prefers Flowers Of Garden To Politics

SAINT VINCENT SUR JARD, VENDEE, France, Sept. 28.—With the winds from the sea whipping back the warmth of summer, the old Tiger of France awoke eighty-five years old this morning.

Telegrams and letters bearing famous and obscure signatures poured in from all quarters of the globe upon the man who for France made the war and made the peace—Georges Clemenceau.

This birthday, undoubtedly, meant more to Clemenceau than others, for at eighty-five.....But if it did he did not show it. The old man who re-shuffled the destinies of Europe and Asia went about enjoying the evening of life as usual, at arm's length even from this little hamlet, dozing along like oxen that pull their primitive carts.

And he scowled at his large mail and unusual number of telegrams that arrived for him this morning, later grumbling kindly at the peasant folk who came up from the village to wish their "vieux Tigre" many more birthdays as their most distinguished townsman.

As Clemenceau took the correspondent around his little estate, he talked about himself.

"Ah, yes, I am old, but these years have been the beautiful ones of my life." And showing his constantly gloved hands, "My hands are all dried up. J'ai fait toute la guerre, I made the entire war as a sick man. At the very end, I can tell you I was tired, very tired."

The old man, whose name is scattered throughout the pages of history of the Third Republic, walks with the firmness of step of many men at sixty. But frequent gasps for breath tell his age.

"And after I left power I went to India to bag some tigers," continued France's Tiger. "The doctors told me I should hurry home, but I wouldn't until my trip was over. And since then my five years at rest in contemplation of life as I have seen it and in comparison with what I have read, have been the most beautiful part of my life."

"Come," said the war premier, "if you are good, I will take you through my flower garden. I make the flowers grow with sea weeds. There are no walks in this garden for in a garden with walks you see the same flowers every day. Here there is always a surprise.

"This is better than politics," said the Tiger, and wistfully, probably referring to the controversy over the debts, " if my country were well, I could be completely happy."

PRIEST FILES SUIT TO RECOVER MONEY

GIRARD, Kas., Sept. 28.—Four insurance companies are named defendants in a suit filed by a Catholic priest here asking to recover $50,000 and nearly a thousand acres of land in Crawford County.

The priest, the Rev. F. M. Verdan, who has been pastor of the Catholic Church of Greenbush, Kas. near here for forty years, charges in his suit that assignments of the property were made to Francis J. Matre, Chicago, as an investment in the insurance company's and that he has received no returns for his investment.

Matre and his associates are said to have formed the insurance companies. The priest states he lost 1,440 acres of land in Kansas and a residence property in Illinois, in addition to the land he is seeking to recover.

ASSIGN MINISTERS AT ELYRIA MEETING

ELYRIA, O., Sept. 28.—The annual conference of the Northeast Ohio Conference of Methodist Churches closed here today with the assignment of more than 500 ministers to charges.

The final resolution passed by the conference concerned wars. The resolution neither supported nor condemned pacificism and was a compromise between former pledges of loyalty and the "peace at any price" resolution of 1925.

Bishop Theodore Henderson worked until 4 a. m. today with a corps of assistants preparing the assignments which were announced this morning.

MADE MODERATOR

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 28—Russell McCullough of Defiance college was elected moderator of Toledo Presbytery at the annual fall m eting here.

The resignation of Rev. George Young, Tiffin Presbyterian Church was accepted.

BUSINESS CONTINUED GOOD IN AUGUST SAYS MONTHLY REPORT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—While business generally continued to prosper during August, production in some basic industries declined, the federal reserve board's monthly business summary published today revealed.

Textile mill industry and production of steel ingots, zinc and petroleum increased while the output of pig iron, lumber, coal, copper, cement and sugar was smaller than the month before.

Automobile production, however ,increased considerably in August and was larger than any month since April.

Factory payrolls, after declining in July increased in August.

Midwestern states during the month increased building activities but in eastern and southeastern states the volume of building was smaller than a year ago. Contracts for consideration of residential buildings, were smaller than in August, 1925, while for industrial buildings increased.

Wholesale commodity prices declined more than one per cent during August, reflecting largely price decreases for grains, livestock and meat products. Prices of clothing materials, fuel and metals increased while cotton, wool, sugar, building material and rubber prices showed little change in the month.

FAMOUS HOUSE VAUDEVILLE TEAM IS BROKEN UP AS TERMS DRAW TO CLOSE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Two of the team of what blase Washington calls the House vaudevillians are about to pass from the congressional stage.

Rep. William D. Upshaw, Dem., whose tourneys against the demon rum have often furnished the house with the spiciness of a sideshow, has been beaten in the Georgia primaries. The engagement of Rep. John P. Hill, "Rider of the White Charger" and defiant wet, terminates in March, and he has been defeated in an attempt to win the Republican senatorial nomination in Maryland.

With their passing the House must look elsewhere for its histronic talent. It has many other performers who help brighten the sometimes dull and uninteresting sessions but none are in the class with Upshaw and Hill.

A dry blast by Upshaw or Hill speech demanding modification of the Volstead act invariably started an afternoon of fireworks. Both always draw a large crowd of listeners when they aired themselves on the prohibition question.

Hill acquired the title of "Rider of the White Charger" after a big wet demonstration and parade in Baltimore several years ago. He headed the parade on a snow white horse.

Upshaw termed him "Moses," declaring the wets needed someone like the Biblical character "to lead them out of the wilderness." Hill became known nationally when he made wine in his cellar and was arrested and acquitted in a test case.

Kidnapped Priest Bares Terrorism

That an organized system of terrorism, with hooded mobs performing deeds of violence upon defenseless and often innocent persons, exists in Virginia is the statement of Rev. Father Vincent B. Warren, above, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Norfolk, who himself was recently kidnapped and attacked by a band of 28 men who were clad in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan.

EIGHTY NINE PROFS FROM O. S. U. FOUND IN NEW "WHO'S WHO"

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 27.—Eighty-nine of 201 full professors on the Ohio State University faculty are sufficiently prominent and important to be included in the latest edition of "Who's Who in America." Fifteen additional faculty members are recognized in the newest volume.

Chief among the new additions to the list from Ohio State's campus is President George W. Rightmire. Seven of the eleven deans of the colleges and forty-one chairmen of departments of instruction also are included in the university's contribution to "Who's Who."

Ohio State professors making their debut in the present volume include Firman E. Bear, soils specialist; C. E. Boord, chemist; J. N. Bradford, architect; Harold Burtt, psychology; Francis Coker, political scientist; Verne A. Dodd, surgeon; William L. Evans, chemist; Ralph Fanning, fine arts.

Homer Hockett, historian; Edward Mack, chemist; Edgar McNeal, Edwin Pahlow, history of education; Ross Purdy, ceramicist; and Vivian Thayer, education.

MARRIAGE DATES ANNOUNCED MONDAY

Two brides-to-be were honored when Miss Dorothy Zell entertained with a bridge-luncheon at her home on W. Market St., Monday. Dates of the marriage of Miss Katherine Hollencamp to Mr. Richard Baird, Dayton, and Miss Janice Owens to Mr. Raymond A. Higgins, were announced.

The marriage date of Miss Hollencamp and Mr. Baird, next Thursday, September 30 and Miss Owens and Mr. Higgins, October 14, were found on the reverse of the place cards.

Miss Hollencamp is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Hollencamp, E. Second St. Mr. Baird's home is in Dayton, but he has been located in Erie, Pa., as district manager of the Duro Pump Co. He has recently been transferred to Dayton ,where he and his bride will reside.

Miss Owens is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Owens, W. Third St. Mr. Higgins is managing editor of The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican. They will reside in this city.

Guests for six tables were entertained by Miss Zell. Miss Elsie Kennedy was awarded high score prize and the honor guests were presented hand-embroidered pillow slips as guest prizes.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. A. L. Gaddis, the Misses Ruth and Josephine Bollinger, Miss Rose Kelly, Miss Mary Catherine Brennan, Miss Helen Hickson, and Mrs. Bernard Hollencamp, all of Dayton, and Mrs. Lawrence Kemp, Middletown.

FOX-MURRAY NUPTIALS IN YELLOW SPRINGS

Miss Ellen Murray, daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Murray, Yellow Springs, and Mr. William Fox, this city, were united in marriage at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Yellow Springs, Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock with nuptial high mass. The Rev. John Schawe, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis Murray, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, were the attendants. Miss Murray wore a gown of china blue crepe with a large hat and feather boa to harmonize. She carred a pearl rosary. Mrs. Murray wore an outfit of cocoa brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Fox left immediately for Dayton where they will depart for their wedding trip destination. They will be at home in ten days at their residence on N. Detroit St. Mr. Fox is employed as an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

MONTHLY LEGION AUXILIARY MEETING

The report that eight prettily made cretonne bags, containing useful articles had been sent from the local unit to World War boys at Dayton Military Home, was included in the business transacted by American Legion Auxiliary, of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, at the monthly meeting in Post Hall, Court House, Monday evening.

The meeting opened with the salute to the flag and prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Walter Dean. Mrs. William Rickels and Mrs. Ohmer Ttate, delegates from the local unit to the state convention at Elyria were present and gave excellent reports of the meeting.

A social time followed, with a musical program by Kathryn Hibbert, Kathryn Mangan, pianists and Guido Pesavento, violinist, students from the musical department of St. Brigid's School, which was greatly enjoyed. A dainty refreshment course was served by Mrs. William H. Sanders, chairman and Mrs. W. R. Bennington.

DAUGHTER OF YELLOW SPRINGS WOMAN MARRIED

The marriage of Mrs. Adeline Titus, daughter of Mrs. May Bowman Showell, Yellow Springs, to Mr. Edward Leeper, Philadelphia, which was solemnized at noon Saturday at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., is being announced.

Only members of the wedding party attended the service. Among those present were Mrs. May Bowman Showell, and Mrs. Francis Comstock (Darlington Showell) of Princeton, N. J.

Mr. Leeper is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leeper, of Wayne, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. He is a graduate of Princeton. During the World War he served as an officer in the navy. At present he is practicing law in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Leeper will spend a month's wedding trip in Canada, before going to Wayne, Pa., where they will make their home.

CARDS ATTRACT WOMEN TO CLUB

Despite the inclement weather, Monday was a pleasant day at the Country Club, where a group of thirty-five women spent the morning with cards and later enjoyed luncheon.

Rain made golf impossible and the card tables were filled with lovers of the game.

An "open meeting" will be held next Monday when all club members will be entertained with cards.

Mrs. H. C. Messenger, N. King St., left Monday night, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. N. H. Fairbanks and her sister, Miss Marceline. Fairbanks, Springfield, on a motor trip East. They will visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington, etc.

BUSTLE EFFECTS RETURN TO STYLE

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The bustle-bow is introduced for those who have overcome plumpness by fair means or foul. For in spite of the size of the bustle bow or drape at the rear of the frock one must still appear to have the framework of an eel. For those who can wear the bow becomingly it is one of the most fascinating styles of the coming season.

As a rule, the bustle-backed frock is made with a slightly blousing bodice which extends just below the normal waistline. Beneath the blouse a wide sash extends about the hip line attached to an apron front or to side panels. The sash terminates in a butterfly bow at the rear of the skirt. Where the apron-front effect is used it extends well toward the rear of the skirt and is often finished with a soft flounce or flounces at the hem. The tying of the sash shortens the length of the apron slightly at the rear.

Black satin or crepe are most popular materials for the bustle gown since higher colors add to the effect of one's size. A particularly attractive gown which uses black satin as it's medium has a slightly bloused bodice extending just below the normal waistline, a flat sash of self material to which are attached gathered sidepanels and which ties in a bow at the rear, huge kimono-shaped sleeves and a high neckline formed by a straight piece of material which ties in a bow at the rear of the neck. At the bottom of the side-panels are two deep ruffles lined in Chapel red. The wide sleeves are likewise lined in red for a distance of eight inches from the hem.

Another lovely bustle model which is made of black silk crepe uses a long sash which is at least a foot in width. The top of the sash is attached to the bodice just below the scant blouse and the sash lays in folds when drawn about bustle models, a rounding front apron finished with a ruffle lined in gold cloth is attached to the front of the deep sash. When these models are off the figure they are not particularly good looking since it remains to the tautness of the sash to shorten the front apron. The tying of the bow also is of importance since it must give the bustle effect without adding bulk to the figure. Sleeves of most bustle gowns are wide, often being attached to the gown only at the shoulders in which they are merely straight tube-shape affairs.

Dame Fashion Shunts Bright Colors In Favor Of Duller Shades For Fall

Dame Fashion is in a subtle mood. She has cast aside her bright vivid colors, and the pastel shades of Spring and Summer. In their place, for her Fall and Winter garments, more quiet tones and duller shades have attracted her eye and will meet with the approval of her followers.

We are sure Dame Fashion will not be depriving her cohorts of beauty and chic with her selection of the dark shades for the new seasons. There is an air of distinction and richness in each of the new, fashionable colors, and any woman arrayed in the chosen shades can rest assured she is suitably gowned with a coat and chapeau of the same tones.

And, characteristic of the frivolous mood of Dame Fashion and her love of a disconcerting note, she has introduced an occasional touch of color. Sometimes there is a bit of gypsy embroidery to give a mysterious air of old Romany to an otherwise simple and quiet frock. And again, she may dictate a wide and flowing sleeve, which relieves the straight simplicity of the silk or woolen frock. There are dainty, fancy pockets and a narrow neckline of a rich, bright tone.

But, in the main, Dame Fashion has decreed that frocks, coats and hats shall be of a richness and darkness of color, that is a distinct departure from previous seasons. Xenia buyers and saleswomen are elated over the early models arriving. They are pleased with the simplicity of line, that adapts itself to all figures and the dark shades, that dispel the disconcerting effect of many and varied bright shades.

Black, Xenia buyers declare, is in the lead for Fall and Winter in dresses, and quite popular in coats and hats. Crepe-back satin, other satins, crepes and all silky materials lead in popularity with rich twills and woolens for cooler months.

Next in order comes chanel red, a deep rich red. This color is shown in frocks, coats and hats. Other colors, which carry out the dark-shade decree, are navy blue, jungle green, and dark tans. The larger number of frocks show the blouse and bolera effects. The straight lines are broken with a two-piece effect. Theer are tiers and tucks to relieve the severity. The surplice effect is striking in many models. Despite their dark shades and straight lines , the dresses follow no one character, but are for dress and sport. The straight lines are adaptable to both stout and slim and are meeting with the approval of women.

Just as she decided on touches of bright colors to relieve the sombre note in dresses, Dame Fashion has dictated fur for all coats. Cloth coats are trimmed with fur collar and cuffs. The marvella, velsheen and other rich materials, in black, wine, grackle (grey), browns and other dark shades are combined with fox, platinum, wolf, beaver, and squirrel. The straight lines are broken with fancy pockets, cord tucking and inserts of self material. Xenia stores are showing handsome fur coats in silver muskrat, Australian seal, beaverette and kitskin. The last named fur is just being introduced and is bound to meet with popular favor. It is of a rich softness in toned grey, the light fur next to the skin toning into a deep grey. One particularly striking model in a local shop was of kitskin, a sport model, reversible, lined with natural kasha which could be worn outside, with fur collar and cuffs.

Sport coats are often fur-trimmed, but in the main are of a brighter combination, of plaids, checks and novelties.

The same colors that predominate in frocks lead in hats. Chanel red and claret red, vie with jungle green and the wood shades of brown. Sand and black are also good. Large hats are being shown for dress, with the smaller models popular for street and sport. Soft felts and velours are the "best sellers" with velvets, silk combinations and satins coming in close. The small types are crushable and easily adapted to any style.

Altogether the Fall and Winter attired woman will have a smart appearance, the rich, dull tones of her costume harmonizing into a quiet but chic effect.

What Is So Personal As Your CLOTHES?

Quality, to express itself thoroughly, must be a co-ordinated attainment. The finest fabrics ever loomed will not stand up under poor tailoring. Nor will good tailoring bolster up a cloth that quickly deteriorates. But when good fabrics and good tailoring are combined then it's worth while laying on a veneer of distinctive style—as we do. PAY NOT ONLY REWARD

Consciousness of work well done does not go far with any of us, notwithstanding moralists to the effect that it is reward enough. The pay envelope is indispensable, grossly material though it be, and it has to satisfy the vast majority of toilers. The wise employer does not, however, overlook the spiritual value of a bit of appreciation otherwise expressed. Yet modern conditions are unfavorable, in large business organizations at any rate.

Not all workers can define the lack though sensible that some form of gratification is wanting. They will recognize it in the explanation given by Mme. Alla Nazimova of her decision to leave the picture stage and return to the spoken drama. She has been getting "big" money and her pictures have thrilled thousands of admirers. But Mme Nazimova craves applause.

At the end of a big scene in the studio she limps away to the clatter of mechanical devices and the orders of the director as to when next to report for work. On the vocal stage the death agonies that she makes real to her audiences are sweetened by the thunders of hand-clapping as the curtain descends. That's the only real reward for the actor appropriately tempermental. Some, to be sure, find their satisfaction in the size of the pay check they receive each week or month It roars louder than any audience, refined or unrefined. It should be assurance enough of work well done, and it is for most. Still, the satisfaction of the spirit is a prize.

Mme. Nazimova is to be congratulated on being able to work where she will get both kinds of reward.

STRICKEN FLORIDA

The Florida disaster appeals in its suddenness as much as in its awfulness. Cities that had been built to greatness as if by magic have been made waste by the elements overnight. The work of men's hands seems gone for naught. Faith itself seems shattered. Uncounted hundreds of the poor bodies that but yesterday worked so happily, believed so buoyantly, lie broken, dead or dying.

Yet the dirge is changing to softer theme. Calm will come as the sun again breaks through the angry skies. And with calm, the bitterness of recollection will be mellowed by the revelation of acts of unselfishness, self-sacrifice, heroism such as glorify man's greatest trials.

And then faith will return and the survivors of this horror will set themselves to the painful task of bringing order out of chaos, salvage out of loss, and to rebuilding greater, safer cities—cities more beautiful if that be possible—than those that now lie stricken.

Galveston, San Francisco, Tokio have risen from flood, or earthquake, or fire. So will Miami rise again. That Miami is a new city, devastated in its youth, may make the task the harder. But, on the other hand, Miami's youth may fire its heart to the greater courage.

That Florida's population has been drawn so generally from the country at large gives the tragedy a peculiarly national significance, makes countless thousands in distant states feel a personal grief in the destruction that was borne on the wings of the storm.

RADIO NOT NEW

Charles Kellogg, the birdman, declares that the radio is not a new idea. He says the birds have used the same idea for thousands of years, and that savages in the jungles have a system by which they send messages from one place to another in a mysterious way which can only be explained as a sort of radio. Birds learned to fly before man, so that it is not surprising they should have discovered the principle of the radio ahead of us. It has even been suggested that the original antennae were the "feelers" various insects bear upon their heads and which have always been regarded as merely serving the purpose of feeling their way about. Now it is thought they may be the means by which they communicate with their kind when at a distance. It may be true. Each new discovery helps us to make a lot of others.

Today's Talk

THE JOURNEY OF THE SAD HEART

Shakespere speaks of the man whose elements were so mixed in him that one could stand up before all the world and say: "This was a man!"

Since this remarkable, though simple assertion, which occurred in Shakespere's great play "Julius Caesar," we of a later experience know that it takes an extraordinary mixture to really make a man.

In spiritual proportion we find the highest development in a man's character, for through it alone is a man brought to the roots of beauty. It is from here that he grows his dream.

But the dreamer must be a poet as well, and he is a sad and lonely figure who is strong enough to make his way through the makeshift intricacies of mechanical gain and commercial power, to where his star rests.

I recently read of the return to England of the great sculptor, Albert Gilbert, self-exiled nearly a quarter of a century ago. His was an ideal of no compromise with perfection. Loss of all he had meant nothing beside this determination on his part to carry out the expression of his heart without trimming. But this meant a storm of criticism, and finally debt and a broken heart. And so he left his native land intending never to return.

But the other day Gilbert did return and he is to complete one of his most noted works, left unfinished. Much is learned in twenty years, and so it is believed that the great artist will be permitted to end his sad journey in triumph.

You can't tie a sensitive heart to a rule.

The understanding heart has its own garden of beauty. Its flowers are its own best loved. So that when the sad road outside tires too much, it can find its garden again, its beauty and its love.

The Theatre

What does it cost to be a well-dressed clubman?

Take Warren Dow for an authority. He says the male of the species is prone to tear his hair, moan in a loud tone of voice, and otherwise register grief in large quantities when his wife's bills for millinery and evening gowns come rolling in about the first of the month.

Yet, he continues, when the masculine fashion plate steps forth correctly attired for an evening at the opera or other social functions, the combined cost of the various parts of his costume will easily equal the price tag on a new flivver coupe.

Ramon Novarro is noted in Hollywood for being correctly garbed on every conceivable occasion. It costs the star about $450 to be outfitted as we will presently show—and the end is far from reached. Studs and links remain to be obtained to complete the costume. The exact cost of these is a matter of individual preference ranging from a possible minimum of $25 or $50 to well into the thousands.

Here is how Novarro spends his $430, Dow says: High silk hat, familiarly known as a "topper," $10; custom-tailored suit of black broadcloth, including trousers and swallow-tailed coat, $175; vest, or waistcoat of, white silk material, $25; gloves, also of white silk, $5; patent leather pumps, $15; opera top coat, of black broadcloth, $75.

White silk tie and bat-wing collar, $2.50; stiff-bosom shirt, of linen, $5; white silk handkerchief, $3; socks, plain black and heavy silk, $2.50; walking stick, $12; total cost of outfit, minus studs and links is $430.

The truth will out it is alleged and nobody suspected that Louise Fazenda was married until they found out she was going to be married again. Louise, one critic has it, is as clever off the screen as she is on, and cagey as well, and even to her close friends her life is more or less of a mystery.

So it was quite a surprise to Hollywood when she filed suit for divorce under the name of Louise Smith, with the intention of marrying Hal Wallis as soon as she was free. Hal Wallis is head of Warner Brothers' publicity department, and almost as nice as Louise and his devotion to her wasn't much of a secret. But nobody knew that Noel Smith, a director working right under her nose on the Warner lot, was even casually connected with Louise's past. Even he and Louise seemed to forget that he was her husband.

HEARS EVANGELIST IN CONSPIRACY CASE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2 —District Attorney Asa Keyes today was to attempt to show that Aimee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist is guilty of the sins against which she has preached from her pulpit in Angelus Temple and should be held for trial in superior court on charges of conspiring to defeat justice.

Mrs. McPherson was to be given a preliminary hearing on the charges contained in affidavits upon which warrants for her arrest with four associates were issued. The charges grow out of two alleged "confessions" of women that they were hired by her to pose as the "Miss X", mysterious woman companion of Kenneth Ormiston, former radio operator of Angelus Temple at Carmel By The Sea last Summer during Miss McPherson's disappearance.

THE NEWS A GREAT EDUCATOR IN THE WISE HANDLING OF MONEY

How can a man or woman, with little or no experience in investing learn to handle his savings wisely, for the bettering of his own or his family's condition? Where can he go to get readily understandable, practical information without loss of time or interference with other activities.

There's a quick, practical answer to these questions, right under the nose of every person who reads a responsible newspaper with capably edited financial news and business news. The person of adult intelligence who will give only 20 minutes a day to reading such financial news will in a remarkable short time be able to avoid most of the tricks of fakers and bucket shops and to discriminate between the honest and the twilight zone in investigation.

What should the reader look for? The daily market reports?

No. The markets are so big, price fluctuations mean little to anyone who has only small knowledge of what is behind them. Look for the news items that tell of the successful and the unsuccessful business operations, of the businesses that are making money, of lines of business that are dragging bottom, of dividends declared or dividends passed, of bonds called for payment before they are due and of the issues of new bonds and stocks by recognized businesses and dependable governments.

What can the reader get from all this? Isn't it too technical?

First, he can get rid of the money losing idea that it is practical to get something for nothing. The huge dream-like profits many people imagine are the rare exceptions. Almost every enterprise has to plow right back into its business a large part of its profits if it is to continue successful. As a rule, the dependable business can pay only a fair, reasonable return. The reader will learn from news of this kind what lines of business seem more dependable as investments and which individual businesses more desirable. He will learn that bond houses and security dealers are known by the company they keep and that the first essential in safe investing is to take time to learn the character and reputation of the security dealer.

As to technical terms, there's virtually nothing in the financial page that adult intelligence cannot easily comprehend. There's no mystery in safe investing. It's wholly a matter of finding financial enterprises that are honestly and capably managed. For many, reading financial news will be at first a bit of a chore; they are unaccustomed to it. But gradually, with only 20 minutes a day, it will become intensely interesting, for there is no livelier romance than that of business. There's no more practical preventive from being a sucker than time so spent. There's no handier gate to the road to financial independence, for the inexperienced investor.

BERNARR MACFADDEN

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

An inflammatory skin eruption due to a gouty condition or caused by stomach and intestinal disturbances is called eczema. It is usually more or less chronic and may appear on any part of the body. It may take the form of simple redness of the skin or appear as scales, pustules or fissures. Intense irritation accompanies this disease when severe in form. Occasionally a discharge takes place from an inflamed area. The eruption that appears in many cases of fever is generally eczemic in nature.

This disease is entirely constitutional; in other words, it does not come from external causes and is seldom due to local influences. No matter where the inflammation associated with the eczema may appear, it must be remembered that the poisons which are eliminated through these particular manifestations are supplied by the blood; therefore, eczema is really a blood, or a constitutional disease, and it must be treated as such.

The ordinary methods of treating this trouble, with outside applications alone, will in many instances be inefficient. I make this statement because such treatment simply heals the surface sores without removing the constitutional cause. Naturally in many cases one cannot heal the inflamed surface no matter what drugs may be employed, and under such circumstances this is really to the advantage of the patient, for if these poisons are thrown back into the general circulation, in many instances they might be the cause of another disease far more serious in character.

Realizing, therefore, that this is a constitutional difficulty one may then proceed with a blood-purifying process, commencing with a fast. This fast should be continued for from five to twenty days, depending altogether on the vitality and weight of the patient. If one carries considerable surplus weight, then a longer period would be much more satisfactory; though even when one is possessed of surplus fatty tissue, if the vitality is low a long fast must be taken with caution. If one is normal weight than a shorter fast would be more satisfactory, indeed necessary. In practically every instance I would emphasize the importance of following this fast with a milk diet. The exclusive milk diet seems to be peculiarly advantageous.

SIDELIGHTS ON Greene County History

FIRST GRAND JURY

Over in the corner sit the members of the grand jury, a fine looking body of men.

Sugarcreek Twp. is well represented on said jury. Out of fourteen, Sugarcreek has seven, namely Joseph C. Vance, John Wilson, William Buckles, Abraham Van Eaton, James Snodgrass, Robert Snodgrass, Robert Marshall and Alexander Armstrong.

Mad River Twp. for some reason, was not represented on the jury. Caesarcreek Twp. was represented by William I. Stewart, who was chosen as foreman, Martin Mendenhall and Joseph Wilson.

Beavercreek Twp., in which the court was held, was represented by John Judy, Evan Morgan, John Buckhannon and Harry Martin.

This, however, is no ordinary jury, it is the personnel of the first grand jury of Greene County.

Just Folks BY EDGAR A. GUEST

SIMPLE THINGS

I like to fling the doorway wide and bid a friend come in,
I like to have a blazing fire in which my dreams to spin,
I like an easy chair at times and books to read at night,
A little garden space outside with blossoms red and white,
A bowl of soup and home-made
bread, a yellow bird that sings,
For happiness, it seems to me, is born of simple things.

charms
I've seen along the way.
A red geranium in a pot, a little child at play,
A maple tree in scarlet dressed, a
The blush upon a maiden's cheek,
the twinkle in her eye,
patch of summer sky,
All these have set my blood aglow
and never lost their fire,
For life is filled with countless joys of which we never tire.

We weary of the fame we win and
sicken of our gold,
The joy which once we thought they had they do not seem to hold,
But man can sit with friends
burn
And want them all to come again
and wait for their return,
And when October tints once more
an old familiar tree
There's none so bored by beauty
but will turn his eyes to see.

No man grows weary of his fire,
his books and easy chair,
The roses he has brought to bloom
to him are always fair,
The more familiar joys become the
deeper grows his love.
Who wearies of a lovely moon and all the stars above?
So mindful of the thrill of power
and all that money brings
It seems to me the lasting joys are born of simple things.

By Jack O'Donnell

The hall bedrooms of Gotham—not to mention the cellars and garrets of the Village—are filled with people who have left small towns and come to New York because they wanted to find solitude! For in Manhattan solitude is truly gorgeous. Here, elbowed by millions, one may be truly alone. In small cities, a man may build walls around himself, but his actions occupy the thoughts of a circle of acquaintances. He is bound by the homogeneous nature of the civilized community.

Here all can be drowned in the general clamor. Walk up Fifth Avenue—you will neither be seen, heard nor considered. You may invite your soul at 42nd Street and Broadway. Indeed, right on the fringe of Times Square is a hostelry called the Hermitage.

In the howling darkness of the subway, you may wedge yourself down, a tabloid newspaper in one ear, a baby's fist in the other, and enjoy enchanted moments of a completely separate existence.

Watch the people crushed on the car platform. Their physical juxta-position would make a sardine whimper with envy. Arms, legs and clothes are pinned tight in the particular pose in which they were caught when the onslaught came—an elbow raised unnaturally, a woman's hat cocked back, a boy's leg half off the floor. Yet each person hermetically sealed in his own thoughts, happy in being alone.

Way down deep in every one's heart, anyway, is a longing to live alone in a garret, and be solitary in a crowd.

Young girls at the peach-bloom age receive a Million Dollar Polish i: New York's elite finishing schools for refined Daughters of Decorum.

Medium-weight matrons with an English accent and a knowledge of French grammar make a good living by preparing these wealthy young ladies to become debutantes.

Finishing schools are as numerous in the upper west side as pickle wagons in the Bowery.

The other afternoon I was at a matinee of "Arms and the Man," and sat behind a delegation of young maids from a school, guarded by two robust and seemly spinsters. After the first act, in which the hero made so bold as to fall asleep in the heroine's boudoir because he happened to be very tired the two guardians held an earnest conference as to the advisability of allowing their charges to stay for the rest of the show. After all, their daddies were paying $2500 a year for their protection.

Sometimes I get tired of hearing fellows who tell me they "never had a chance." Specially after walking through 57th Street and seeing a seedy old person without any teeth, selling brass polish from a tripod, while the cop at the corner was looking the other way. In the ten minutes that I stood and watched I saw him take in $12— considerably better than a dollar a minute.

What chance had he?

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Bride: "Can 'Chicken Mousse' be made with two or three cups of cold cooked chicken? My husband and I generally have a small fowl on Sundays and there is about this much chicken left over. If so, please give me a recipe for the dish. I thought it would be a rather unusual one to serve another young married conple who are friends of ours and who come often to supper Sunday nights."

Answer: Yes, the mousse can be made with two cups of chicken diced. It is a delicate yet satisfying, nourishing way to serve fowl left-overs. Here is the recipe: Chicken Mousse; Into a pan put one cup of either canned (strained) chicken soup, or one cup of the "stock" in which a fricasseed fowl has been cooked. Add to this two tablespoons of granulated gelatine softened in one-half cup of cold water; put the mixture over the fire, and heat till boiling, stirring constantly. Then remove it from the range, add to it the two cups of cooked chicken and more salt and pepper if not highly enough seasoned to suit individual taste, and beat till cold. Fold in one-half cup of heavy or "double" cream whipped stiff (measured before beating). Turn the fluffy mixture into a mold and set away in the ice box. When firm, turn it out onto a platter to serve. (Note: To free any kind of gelatine mixture from the tin, sink the mold up to its rim in boiling or very hot water for just a moment, then remove. You will find that the contents of the mold will slip out easily after this treatment.)

Mrs. W. E. M.: "I was interested in your recent reply to a Column Reader who had asked how to remove stains from her porcelain-topped kitchen table. My table also became stained from such acids as you mentioned (rhubarb, tomato and lemon,) and I cleaned it, just as I scour my sink, with scouring powder, rubbing it as little as I could. It is not quite as shiny now, but looks better than if the stains were still there."

Answer: I am sure that the Reader Friend who first introduced this subject in our column, will be much interested in your letter. Thank you for it.

Modish Mitzi LAKE MICHIGAN PRESENTS AN INTERESTING VIEW Jay V. Jay

From Mitzi's hotel in Chicago, which overlooks the Oak Street Beach on Lake Michigan, she can see many well dressed women. She's curious to know more about them. What sort of hats they are wearing. Well, she will find out. Ingenuity is one of her most dominant characteristics.

The opera glasses have been used before, for other things than opera. Mitzi is training them on the passing styles and getting a remarkably good focus. Mitzi wears a negligee of taffeta with pleating around a fichu collar for this particular indoor sport.

And this is what she sees. The smartly dressed young woman with the flower on her shoulder wears a trotteur type of felt hat with three straps and buckles on the side. Next to her, is a hat of Indo-Chinese design. It's trimmed with little square ornaments.

The tam shape with the side fastened with a pin of brilliants is very smart. The beret hat has a trimming of felt leaves. "I think," remarks Mitzi in her hotel room 15 stories above lake level, "I think hats are nine-tenths crown." Which shows how accurately Mitzi sees fashions even at a long distance.

SUNDAY HITTING FAMINE HAD BAD EFFECT ON RESERVE RECORD

Sunday's burlesque exhibition of baseball in the series tilt with the Merchants, the aftermath of an hour's delay in starting the game, played havoc with the Reserve team batting average.

The team batting fell off to an even .300 mark and although Durnbaugh went hitless for the first time, reducing his average forty-five points, he continues to lead the Reserve heavy hitters with a mark of .400.

In twenty-five games this year, the Reserves have won eighteen games, lost six and tied one. Individual batting records follow:

INDIANS WILL RACE WHITES IN MARATHON

One of the most unique sporting events in history will be held on Cheyenne Mountain at Broadmoor, Colorado Springs, Colo., on October 10. While it is to be a mountain marathon open to all amateurs it will in reality be a contest between Indian and white men long distance runners. Both the Hopi and Zuni Indian tribes have had braves in training for the past two months from whom they will select six of their best to compete with western long distance champions.

Not only will it be unusual because of the contest between Indians and whites but it will be the first mountain marathon ever held in this country. The course is six and one-quarter miles from the toll gate to the summit of Cheyenne Mountain over the new but already famous Broadmoor-Cheyenne Mountain Highway which has an average grade of seven and one-half per cent with 256 curves and swings; the start will be at an elevation of 6,710 feet above sea level and the finish 9,130 feet above sea level. It is planned to make this an annual and an international event.

PLANS CHANGED

Because of adverse weather conditions, scheduled practice for Tilton's Thirty Three football eleven Tuesday night at Cincinnati Ave. Park has been called off and instead the team will meet at 7 o'clock in the gymnasium of Xenia Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, E. Main St. All members of the squad are urged to be present on time.

DETECTIVE FINED BY JUDGE WRIGHT

E. G. Kindle, Springfield, said to be connected with the state prohibition enforcement department at Columbus, was found guilty of reckless driving at his trial before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday morning and fined $10 and costs.

The detective, who at times in the past has been employed for liquor law enforcement work in Greene County, was arrested last week by Patrolman Charles Thompson on an affidavit filed by Hollis Peterson, near Yellow Springs.

Kindle was charged with driving at a rate of speed greater than thirty-five miles an hour on the Springfield and Xenia Pike August 26. It is said he figured in a slight auto collision. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned.

SUED FOR DIVORCE

Her husband struck her and injured her while in a fit of rage during the early part of September and as a result she fears he will do serious harm Martha E. Colvin, Spring Valley, charges in a suit for divorce from John E. Colvin, same addess, filed in the Montgomery County Common Pleas Court Monday.

His wife further alleges that fits of passion approximating brutal tyranny have made it impossible to live with her husband.

"PLEASE BROADCAST THIS"

Major A. B. Ackerman, Barberton, Ohio, says, "Everyone ought to know when to take Foley Pills, diuretic. I found them just the right thing to ease the backache, rheumatic twinges, and increasing weakness due to disturbed kidney and bladder action. Please broadcast this." For Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, are a reliable, valuable medicine, constantly in use over twenty-five years. Guaranteed to give satisfaction. Try them. Ask for Foley ing, too, to stout persons. —Adv.

"Not Possible To Classify" — By Mack Sauer

SCRUBBING THE STATUES

Yesterday I talked with the man who washes the statues in the state house grounds. He always heats the water before he dashes it over the backs of Ohio's noted sons, so it won't chill them.

"For years I have been bathing the statuary in the capitol grounds," he said. "I have polished the buttons on General Sheridan's waist-coat, dusted off William McKinley's trousers and even rubbed shoulders with General Grant."

"What do you think of Ohio's noted sons?" I inquired.

"They are cold, hard, unfeeling men," he came back. "And between you and me General Philip Sheridan's head is beginning to turn gray here in the sun. There is a piece out of his left ear and his collar is getting dirty."

I inquired of the interesting workman if any of the famed men seemed to mind the water.

"Well," he said, "Salmon P. Chase just smiles right through it all. Yes, I guess Salmon takes to water better than any of the rest of them."

He then turned to scrubbing James A. Garfield's mustache and drying the neck of Rutherford B. Hayes, all the time having a rather dissatisfied look on his face.

"You must enjoy your work here," I ejaculated, chewing my gum madly.

"Yes, but if these dumb lips could only speak a word of praise, or give me a tip for shining their shoes," he moaned as he splashed a bucket of suds down Stanton's pantsleg.

I sat down on the grass and began feeding peanuts to the squirrels. Then I took out a piece of paper and beagn writing this for the readers of The Gazette. When I came to my senses I said:

"Darn that cider."

CHEVROLET DEALER SERVICE INSPIRES SALES OF THIS CAR

The Chevrolet Motor Co., in one division of its service department, is spending over half a million dollars annually on a service promotion program. This program consists of aiding its dealer organization in improving its shop methods and equipment as well as its personnel, in order to give Chevrolet owners better and more efficient service.

Service promotion deals with the efficient layout, equipping, and operating of the dealer's service station. It offers a standardized plan of shop layout, making available special Chevrolet tool equipment, and provides assistance to the dealer organization in properly installing these methods. The flat rate method of charging for repair work is suggested in this plan as it insures an equitable charge for both the owner and the dealer.

The proper training of the dealer's personnel is taken care of by the operation of twenty-two permanently located service schools in different parts of the United States. These schools are attended by Chevrolet dealers, their service managers, shop foremen and mechanics who receive an intensive training course in the proper methods and tools to use in repairing Chevrolet cars. Special courses are provided for dealers, their service managers and shop foremen on the subject of shop management.

As a result of this increased efficiency in its dealer's service, Chevrolet is achieving widespread recognition and the quality of its service is becoming more and more a factor in promoting new car sales.

Lang Chevrolet Co., Green St., will be glad to show you this car.

COUNTY BUDGET TO BE LOWER; TAX RATE MAY BE SLICED HERE

mother's pension fund, $4,000; election fund, $4,000; judicial fund, $8,000; library fund, $3,000; interest and sinking fund $88,000; road fund, $102,000.

According to County Auditor R. O. Wead the Xenia city, county and city school tax rates for 1927 cannot be computed until the tax duplicate is prepared and the reappraisal of real estate is ascertained. This work will not be finished btfore some tim in Novmtaoin shrdlu cmfwyp vbgkqj etaoin ber at the earliest.

Auditor Wead believes the tax duplicate will be higher because of estimated higher property valuations and consequently this may have a bearing on possibly lowering the various tax rates in the county's fifty-four taxing districts.

Xenia city's 1927 budget calls for more money for operating expenses than for 1926 but even then the total 1926 rate of $26 per $1,000 property valaution may be rtduced should the tax duplicate be sufficiently greater. Xenia schools also have asked for an increased budget and the same situation prevails.

However, the general county tax rate of 6.10 mills which includes the 2.60 countl rate, 1.50 for the interest and sinking fund and two-mill special levy, will undoubtedly be lowered in view of the reduction in the 1926 county budget and the anticipated increase in the tax duplicate.

NASH COMPANY ADDS NEW EXECUTIVE TO STAFF IS ANNOUNCED

Effective October 15, C. W. Nash, president of The Nash Motors Co., announces the appointment of M. H. Pettit as vice president and assistant general manager of the company. In referring to the addition of Mr. Pettit to the executive personnel of the Company, Mr. Nash says, "Mr. Pettit comes to the company from the Simmons Co., of Kenosha, Wis., and New York, with which company he has been associated for the past three years, working his way up to his present position of vice president and general manager.

When Mr. Pettit made connections with the Simmons Co., three years ago, he resigned the position as vice president of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Co., of Racine, Wis., with which company he had been associated for twenty years, being responsible for the manufacturing activities of that company.

"The addition of Mr. Pettit to the executive force of the company in no way changes the responsibility of the present executives, but will help relieve their present heavy burdens.

"The very substantial development of The Nash Motors Company, and the prospect of continued opportunity for further sound growth, has brought to the executive management of the company increasing responsibility, and it is the policy of the management to maintain executive strength in proportion to the company's needs.

"The addition of Mr. Pettit to our present unchanged executive group makes a strong contribution to our ability to continue the prosperous and growing development of the company in the automobile industry."

BRINGING UP FATHER — By GEORGE McMANUS

European Beret Becomes Popular With Flappers

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — Two youthful motion picture actresses returning from abroad with navy blue Beret skull-tams perched pertly on their heads started something which the flappers are finishing. These tiny tams or Berets, duplicates of those worn by European fishermen, are merely two small circles of cloth sewn together with a round head-aperture finished with a narrow headband. A piece of rolled cloth shaped like a firecracker decorates the center crown. Young girls wear these wee tams low over their foreheads for street and sports occasions.

"Roll your own' is a slogan which many smart women are following. Dozens of little shops are selling unshaped hoods of felt or velour and Milady sits before the mirror and rolls the hood into semblance of a hat while the milliner pins, whacks and sews. At the end of the tussle one has a near duplicate of an import for $7.50. Each shop has numerous models which can be copied in individual headsizes if one wishes the usual thing. Due to the sudden change from boyish to high-crowned shapes this making-on-the-head idea permits one to have an individual model at a nominal cost. Boyish felts still retain their prestige for sportswear however.

Two-toned velvet turbans draped in high-crown effect are among the popular Fall millinery models but unless these carry out the color scheme of the costume they fall far from being smart. Usually the contrasting color is introduced by narrow circular strips extending about the crown although geometrical designs and small diamond-shaped insets are more interesting.

When the color contrast is too pronounced the effect is not as smart as when two well-blended shades of one color are used. Chanel red combined with a lighter pinkish red, jungle green combined with lighter green, brown and burnt-orange, etc., have the blended idea. Unless the two-toned hat harmonizes perfectly with the costume it is better to choose a plain colored velvet model, a shade deeper than the costume.

Velvet must be considered a material for dresswear. It should not be used for sportswear or with strictly tailored outfits. In almost every instance the velvet hat carries out the draped idea which makes it suitable for dress or semi-dress occasions only.

OFFICERS OF XENIA COMPANY QUALIFY FOR PROMOTION

Captain Leroy V. John and four sergeants of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, successfully passed their examinations for promotion at Columbus Monday, it was announced Tuesday.

The examinations were held by the adjutant general's department of the national guard at the House of Representatives in the state house. This is a departure from the usual custom and under a new policy recently made operative, the examinations are held at Columbus. Heretofore the examining board visited the city in question.

Captain John, one of three others in the state to take the examination for the rank of major, qualified for this promotion.

Sergeants Frank Davis, Alva Burgert, Jesse Burgert and William Thompson qualified as second lieutenants and their names will be placed on the eligible list to become officers should any vacancies occur in the future.

The examinations began at 9 o'clock Monday morning and lasted until late in the afternoon.

ADAM F. LONG DIES SUDDENLY MONDAY

Suffering a sudden heart attack while recovering from an attack of intestinal grip, Adam F. Long, 73, died at his home, 119 Home Ave., Monday evening at 5 o'clock. He had been ill a week but was able to be up Monday and suffered the fatal attack while resting.

Mr. Long was born near Lancaster, O., October 22, 1852. He resided in Xenia twenty-seven years and was employed on Greene County road work.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ellen Long, who is confined in bed with rheumatism. The following sisters, Mrs. Samantha Middleton, Wilmington Pike; Mrs. Margaret J. Rheberg, Iowa and Mrs. Elizabeth Mercer, Antwerp, O.,—survive with two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Jones, at home and Mrs. Earl Striker, Port William, who was reared in the Long home. Two other children preceded him in death.

Mr. Long was a member of First M. E. Church, Xenia. Funeral services will be conducted privately on account of Mrs. Long's illness, at the home, Wednesday at 2:30 with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the home Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

CHANGES PLEA AND SUBMITS TO FINE

Frank Bauer, 31, Shakertown Road, pleading guilty to a charge of illegal possession of liquor, was fined $200 and costs by R. O. Copsey, justice of the peace, Monday afternoon.

He had previously entered pleas of not guilty to two charges of liquor law violation but changed his plea Monday when a second charge of possessing implements designed for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor was withdrawn.

Bauer was arrested a week ago in a raid on his home one mile west of Alpha when Deputy Sheriffs John Baughn and George Spencer uncovered a seventy-five gallon capactiy still and two gallons of whiskey.

SUFFER IN STORM

CHAPTER 12

IN GREENWICH VILLAGE

With a heart attune to happiness, Mary Forrest walked by the side of Philip Andover through the Bohemian section of New York that bears the name of Greenwich Village.

"How quaint!" she exclaimed stopping to peer through a stable door that was ajar. In the interior at a wooden table made of trestle-boards, sat a crowd of men and women, eating. A great stable lantern, swinging from above, gave fitful light.

Next door to this odd hostelry was a charming Queen Anne cottage, with its lintel ivy-clad.

Absurd lean-to coffee shops jostled Colonial mansions. In Grace Goodwin's Garret candles sputtered a welcoming light. Short-haired ladies and longhaired men were out aprowl for evening food.

"The intellectual fires are burning," said Philip with a little laugh, as they passed innumerable cellars where, round the open hearth, gay crowds were seated, smoking, eating, drinking and talking busily.

"It's like being at a play," smiled Mary, who had seen few plays in her life, but whom this "show" delightfully entertained. For it was "human."

The pair of them traversed the worn brick pavements. There were endless little "arty" shops with odd candelbra, ancient china, antiques of every sort— or, more modern, full of weird drawings, batik silks, hand-tinted glasses and the like.

Not a single blind was drawn down anywhere, to Mary's wonderment.

Odd, this living in the open, under every eye!

"I suggest we have a decent dinner first—for I won't vouch for the food in any of the lofts or cellars," said Philip. "Atmosphere' and 'color' are a-plenty But the cooking—query?"

He led her to the quaint Green Mule. Its painted sign out front swayed in the evening breeze. They passed through a brick-floored oddly-decorated entresol to the really lovely little restaurant.

A seven-piece negro orchestra crooned forth—upon their instruments and vocally—a song of love. The light was bluish-green. Set square into the yellow plaster walls were small, flat slabs of gass, behind which, in brilliantly-lighted water, goldfish swam. Behind several of these glass-plates, too, a yellow canary hopped and twittered on its perch. It must have thought the strong illumination of its cake was sunshine!

But the quaintest things—to Mary's eyes—were the tiny caves for humans cut into the stucco walls ,immediately below these odd appearing lamps. How could she and Philip ever get inside one?

A waiter in a linen smock of green, with an artist's tam of orange on his head, led them to an alcove.

Philip had to double up, and Mary had to stoop her head, and squeeze herself between the little bench and trestle table that was set for dinner.

"Specially designed for tete-a-tete!" Philip gave his engaging smile. "Is this Aladdin's cave? Or no!"—glancing up at the goldfish swimming directly overhead in a brightly-lit glass tank——"we're in a subterranean grotto, it appears."

They both laughed over the menu, with its comically-named dishes.

"No Green Mule pie for me," said Mary. "I'll have chicken a la King, please. That is safe."

The negro orchestra broke into a fox-trot. While the smock-clad waiter went to fetch their dinner, Philip danced with Mary on the polished floor outside the alcoves. There were several other couples dancing. Although the place was high-priced, few wore evening clothes.

Close to the negro band a magnificent live parrot swung on his golden hoop. His plumage was bright red and green and yellow, and his air aggressive. He regarded all the dancers with a hostile eye. A few of them were just a little shy of that sharp beak, for the bold bird from Jamaica was unchained, and frequently leant forward as though about to take a bite at someone.

"Heavens! He's alive!" gasped Mary.

Some of the couples were not dancing, but sitting, eating and chatting, in the small arched caves. The gold-fish tank above their heads cast golden light upon them. The whole effect was most theatrical.

Philip enjoyed Mary's unspoilt freshness, and the genuine delight she took in deciphering odd rhymes upon the wall anent the old Green Mule. In such places Luella's attitude had been a trifle blase. Nothing was new to her.

"I dance badly," apologized Mary suddenly, looking up at her tall partner with a smile. Her usually pale cheeks were flushed and radiant. At the moment she was almost beautiful. "But you can't think how awfully much I am enjoying all this."

"And so am I," said Philip, and he meant it.

The music ceased, and they went back to their particular grotto, where dinner waited them. The food was excellent. Both were hungry after their long walk .

Towards the conclusion of the meal, a dark handsome, gentlemanly man in tam and coat of velveteen entered the restaurant, carrying a tray before him which was laden wtih multi-colored little packages.

"'Tiny Tim' and his 'soul candy,'" laughed Philip. "He's a well-educated chap, and has a marvelous line f talk. With all the classical allusions he springs at you, you feel so small and illiterate that you simply daren't refuse his Highness's wares!"

Tiny Tim approached their grotto. An ingratiating smile was on his handsome face.

"Still selling sweetmeats?" Philip greeted him. "What about the painting and writing. Tiny Tim? Or is commerce"—he nodded towards the tray—"more profitable?"

"You wrong me, sir," responded Tiny Tim, in his cultured accents, with his head held up. "I offer ambrosia food to the gods, to you and to your goddess." Here he bowed low to Mary with exaggerated courtesy. "To some, I name my wares 'love potions.' But with so beautiful a lady, to whom already you are so attached, that name would be absurd—unnecessary."

He handed Mary a rainbow-tinted package, tied with silver ribbon.

"Who eats of Tiny Tim's 'soul candy' finds the key to the Elysian Fields, where all are happy. The beautiful young lady honors me. But please remember, I am no vulgar tradesman. I am an artist and a gentleman."

Mary took her package, which contained three colored bonbons, and Philip slipped a coin into His Highness's hand.

"Quaint fellow," Philip commented, as the candy-vendor moved away. "They say he's making a fortune with his 'soul candy,' which he never did at painting! There are lots of odd, amusing characters here in the village."

He paid the check, and he and Mary left the gay Green Mule. They dropped into a low-ceiled stable called The Samovar. From thence they visited Peg's Pantry, the Jade Buddha, and Jean's Dye Pot.

But the main excitement was discovered in a cellar named the Boiling Kettle. On rough wooden benches round the walls (which were of stone) sat crowds of men and women, mostly young and good-looking. Coffee and liquid refreshment were in front of them, in pewter pots on trestle tables. Enormous candles, each carved into odd shapes by the hands of artistic visitors, dripped tallow tears, and cast queer, flickering shadows everywhere.

A short-haired girl in an absurd batik "djibbah" with a long-haired poet in a velvet jacket bending over her, was hammering out a tune on a piano.

"There ain't no flies on Moses! An' it ain't gwine ter rain no mo'.

Some young fellows joined gaily in the chorus.

Philip and Mary crossed the uneven floor, and found two seats at a trestle table, facing each other. Philip, with his back to the room, swung around a little, so that he could see something.

A smocked young man was reading Freud. An open book of Nietzche lay close by, upon the table. A girl with horn-rimmed goggles was carving her initials on said table, being very busy over it

Philip ordered a couple of coffees, and surveyed the scene. Mary, too, looked about her with interested eyes.

There were cobwebs on the cellar-windows, and a broken pane had a red rag stuffed in it.

"Symbol of Freedom," said Philip, with a smile.

"But they all look quite well-off, and so—respectable!" protested Mary, puzzled.

"Whatever you do, don't call them that!" her escort chided her, still smiling. "To be called 'respectable' is the final insult here, I can assure you." Then he added, whimsically: "Doesn't it take you back to childhood days? Not one of them"—he looked round the audience again—"have properly grown up, I'll wager."

Peter, the smocked silhouette cutter, put down his book of Freud, and surveyed Mary with professional interest. When she turned her head she had a pretty profile, and one must pick up clients everywhere.

Olivette, the lovely and langorous cigarette-girl, sold a box to Philip, and undulated onwards on her way.

But it was the queer behavior of a handsome boy of about one-and-twenty, well-dressed, who looked as if he might be a college youth on a vacation, that arrested Mary's eye, and made her feel extremely nervous.

He sat on the other side of the table, next to Philip, but the latter. having turned around a little, had his back to him. With long, trembling fingers, the boy incessantly plucked his own coat sleeves. His eyes were glittering oddly. His lips twisted and untwisted in unlovely smiles. And always he kept those brilliant sunken, slightly bloodshot eyes on Mary Forrest.

He leaned forward once and muttered:

"Where the hell've I seen you before?"

Mary drew back, looking towards Philip for assistance. But Philip's head was turned the other way.

Was the boy drunk? He looked so dazed. And yet——

He rose, standing behind Philip's chair, and with the index finger of his right hand mysteriously beckoned Mary. "Come!"

She was alarmed. Philip swung round and saw him.

"Take no notice," he said, sotto voice, knowing the queer customers that blow in and out of the village haunts.

The boy kept standing there, however. Then he moved forward, squeezing in determined fashion into the seat beside the girl.

Philip leaped up immediately.

"Get out at once!"

The boy's eyes glittered, and his lower jaw thrust out.

"No. You leave me 'lone." He turned to Mary, who was trying to draw away from him, although the space was too confined. She was white with terror.

Philip's hands shot out, and gripped the boy's wrists in a vice of steel, wrenching him sharply to his feet, and then jerking him forward, away from the table towards the center of the room.

"I'll kill you," hissed the youth, fumbling in his pockets. "My knife—where is my knife?"

Trembling in every limb, and terrified for Philip's safety, Mary had sprung to her feet.

"He's crazy with dope," said the girl with the goggles, looking up from her carving coolly.

There was a flash of steel, and then a clatter, as the knife—impelled downwards by a dextrous blow from Philip—fell to the stone floor.

The manager of the Boiling Kettle and another man came forward and put the youth outside.

Philip seated himself again, and nodded reassuringly to Mary.

"Finish your coffee, and we'll get away from here. Don't worry. It was nothing."

The manager was apologetic.

"Queer chap! They say he takes cocaine."

"Snow-birds, we call 'em," volunteered the girl in the horn-rimmed glasses lackadaisically.

The scene had caused but little stir. Perhaps the denizens of the Boiling Kettle were inured to such.

Mary was glad, yet at the same time just a little fearful, when—the coffee finished—she and her escort found themselves under the blue sky again. Would the "snow-bird" be waiting for revenge on Philip? He was nowhere to be seen.

In quiet side-streets they saw many a figure silhoutted against studio windows, sculpturing, writing, working at easels.

"There are quite a few who do take their work seriously, though heaps of folks only live in the village to racket round and break conventions," Philip said. "It's the same in the Quartier Latin and in Chelsea on the other side of the Atlantic. Human nature's pretty much the same. The real and the fake, the hookum and the genuine article, side by side."

They dropped into the quaintest little theatre, where, on a twelve-foot stage, a Parisian show was being given. The audience sat on wooden benches. Some of the "turns" were excellent, though just a little startling.

"Let's finish up in The Pirate's Den, and then go home," suggested Philip.

As they walked on the cobbled pavements underneath the skeleton framework of the elevated railway, Mary looked upwards. She gave a little cry.

"Oh, look! The trestles are on fire!"

It was quite true. Tongues of red flame were curling round a couple of the wooden planks.

"We must give the alarm," said Philip quickly. "Trains are due to pass over every couple of minutes, and they easily catch fire."

No policeman was in sight, but a red-painted pillar topped by its glass-fronted "fire alarm" box was only fifty yards along the street. Philip ran to it, snatched the small hammer that hangs on its chain, broke through the glass and gave the signal. Within a very short space of time, the brigades were there in force and the blaze extinguished.

Not wishing publicity in the matter, Philip took Mary off.

"Have you seen sufficient of Greenwich Village now?" he asked with a smile. "You've eaten among the goldfishes, parrots and canaries, you've met a real live dope-fiend, and you've seen an honest-to-goodness fire! Is that enough?"

"Oh, do let's drop into the Pirate's Den, just as a finish-up," begged the young girl, loath to bring the evening—even though, in bits, it had been rather "creepy"—to an end.

"All right. You shall hear the brigands howling beneath the buccaneering beams!"

So into the Pirate's Den they went.

And the first thing that caught their gaze was not the pirates, but the vision of Luella Loder, seated in a comfy corner, with John Rogers' arm about her waist!

She was a helpless victim

No matter how hard she tried, she just kept on being irritable and unpleasant. And who wouldn't, with the splitting, sinus headaches she was always having—the terrible penalty of catarrh.

Yet Hall's Catarrh Medicine can change all that. If you are a sufferer, it will bring relief to you, as it has to thousands of others for over 40 years.

Catarrhal deafness—inflamed sinuses—headaches—bad breath—yield to its power. Thousands have called it a blessing.

Just ask your druggist today for a package of Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Follow the simple directions. Then note the relief. It's your big opportunity. If your druggist hasn't it, send 85c to F. J. Cheney & Company, Toledo, Ohio.

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to a druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

From Maine to California, from Wisconsin to Texas, and from Nebraska to Florida letters are received every day from grateful women who say the Vegetable Compound has helped to restore their health.

BAD BREATH

Usually Caused By Improper Digestion Is Easily Overcome

This condition which detracts so much from an otherwise fine personality and sometimes leads to serious results, is easily eliminated by a very simple treatment, that will at once correct the fault and at the same time aid in the assimilation of food, regulate the system, remove gaseous conditions and leave the stomach sweet and clean. Try for a few days taking a teaspoonful of AGARENE each morning on arising and just before retiring. You will find it very pleasant to take, without any bad after-effects. You can obtain AGARENE from any druggist or sent prepaid in the United States upon receipt of $1.00. Address Hallwen Chemical Corporation, Cincinnati, Ohio. Adv.

Eczema on Hands For Nine Years Cuticura Healed

"About nine years ago eczema started breaking out on my hands and fingers in a rash. It itched badly and when I scratched it, it would burn and eruptions formed. When I put my hands in water it was worse. At night I could not rest or sleep on account of it. The trouble lasted about nine years.

"I tried almost everything I could think of without any benefit. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time I could see that my hands were better. I continued using them and in about two months I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. J. Baker, 539-18th Ave. A, Moline, Ill.

Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum to promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health; the Soap to cleanse and purify, Ointment to soothe and heal and Talcum to powder.

SPORT SLATE NOW CLEARED FOR WORLD SERIES TO START SOON

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—After having been thoroughly washed by the Tunney-Dempsey fight, the decks were being cleared today for baseball as the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees began to prepare for the 1926 world series.

Boxing, golf and tennis gave way and infant football lacked the voice to draw the attention of the public.

Both teams started special training with scouts advising Rogers Hornsby and Miller Huggins about the weaknesses—if any—of their opponents and the business staff of the two clubs was knee-deep in applications for tickets.

The St. Louis officials have several days advantage over the New York office staff as the Yanks refused to accept an application or a check until the American League pennant had been won mathematically, finally and officially.

New York didn't have a civic demonstration when the Yanks won the pennant, like St. Louis threw for the Cardinals. The rather blase way in which the Yanks were accepted as victors was due primarily to the fact that world series games are nothing of a novelty here and New York has exhausted all her hysterics on Gertrude Ederle, Millie Corson and Gene Tunney.

Interest always can be shown by ticket sales and Ed Barrow said he had been flooded with enough advance application since mid-season that he felt reasonably sure of a sell-out.

This is no idle hope for the Yanks as with a good break in the weather two Saturday and two Sunday games will be played in New York and the Yankees Stadium is a huge thing.

Most of the experts are lining up behind the Cards but after the terrible socking the experts took on the fight, the tennis and golf championships and other events, it may mean that the Yanks are sure to win.

The Cards are favored chiefly because they are a younger, faster and better balanced club with the fire of ambition. The Yanks are accustomed to pennants; the Cards never have been in a world's series. The Cards have more good pitchers than the Yanks, and the American League Champs with a bad flop in late season that might have caused them to lose the pennant in another week, showed signs of being stale.

world series playing, may be better money players but the Cards certainly showed no inclination to curl up when they were fighting off the attack of the Reds and Pirates.

WILLIAM MAXWELL PRINTED FIRST LAW BOOK OF TERRITORY

LAWS

OF THE

TERRITORY OF THE UNITED STATES

~~NORTH WEST OF THE~~ OHIO

Adopted and made by the Governour and Judges in their Legislative Capacity, at a Session begun on Friday, the XXIX day of May, one thousand, five hundred and ninety six, and ending on Tuesday the thirtieth fifth day of August following:

TERRITORY.

By Authority.

CINCINNATI:

William Maxwell, former Greene Countian, whose grave lies in Beavercreek Twp., printe the first laws of the old Northwest Territory comprising what is now Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, when a printing press was finally brought through the wilderness in 1796 and set up in the village of Cincinnati.

The title page of this first printed book published for the vast territory north of the Ohio River appears above.

Prior to 1796 Governor St. Clair made the pioneers secure under law by having the laws written in longhand, each copy being certified by himself.

Governor St. Clair and his two judges had spent the sixty-nine days from May 29 to August 5, 1795, under the legislative power granted them by the ordinance of 1787, adapting laws then operative in other parts of the union to the needs of the new Territory, so that the printed laws should be just and pertinent.

William Maxwell then used the press of his "Centinel of the North West Territory" a paper "open to all parties—influenced by none" to run off the book. In many another pioneer community also, the press of the first newspaper was used to print the first book of laws.

The title page here reproduced is from the copy in the Harvard Law School Library, at Cambridge, Mass., one of few in existence. It is a pocket-size volume, six by seven and one-fourth inches of 225 pages, preserved unbound in one-half morocco case.

The grave of William Maxwell, pioneer printer of this territory, who started the trail from Dayton to Xenia, after leaving Cincinnati, was found through the efforts of Catherine Greene Chapter, D. A. R., several months ago.

WANTS EXECUTION BUT WHO'LL BE THE VICTIM

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—A woman with lofty demeanor strutted up to the gates of Ohio Penitentiary.

"What is it for you, ma'am?" asked one of the prisoner trusties who takes the names of visitors.

"Why, I want to see Mr. So-and-So, and while I'm waiting for you to get him, I want to go through the penitentiary, watch the prisoners eat, watch them work and see an electrocution."

The trusty nearly fell dead. But, he never cracked a smile. Instead, he imparted the woman's wishes to William Payne, secretary to Warden Thomas.

After Payne explained that electrocutions, for instance, were not held everytime a visitor wanted to see one, the woman was disappointed. Of all her requests she was granted one—that of seeing the man she wanted to see.

FUTURE OF BIRD DOG IN ENGLAND GLOOMY AMERICAN SPORTSMEN SAY IN CHICAGO

By BERT M. DEMBY

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The future of the bird dog in England seems a gloomy one, in the opinions of several American sportsmen who have returned from attending the field trials in the moors of Scotland and Wales.

According to these opinions the slow dogs with the narrow range and little initiative to hunt birds, have taken the place of the old time fast ranging setters and pointers of the "good old days in Dogdom."

The interest in the setter and pointer field trials grows less each year according to the reports. At the same time the spaniel trials are growing in interest and threaten to usurp all the glory of the wide ranging dogs.

Another thing brought out is that several of the European owners of game preserves have grown so perfect in the art of raising birds in their natural habitat that the pointers are really no longer needed.

This, the sportsmen say, has given rise to the development of the springer spaniel, the dog that keeps always within ranging distance and gun shot of the birds and does his own flushing for the hunters.

As is commonly known, in the trials in this country the best grounds do not furnish enough birds to permit a loafing dog to even get near to winning a place in the trials.

It is up to American dogs to get off from their hunters, sometimes as far as 600 yards and to do their own finding of the game.

In the European trials there are so many birds that the judges require the dogs to keep within a hundred yards of the hunters.

That means that there are too many birds in the course for the dogs to show their real worth. It also means that the spaniel with his springing is more needed over there than the pointer and setter.

That probably accounts for the rapid development of him.

At any rate the initiative of the American setter and pointer class is not required in Europe according to the opinion.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

CLARENCE DARROW

Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer, man of letters and America's foremost "reformer against reform" cracked another idol when speaking of his favorite hobby. He said he didn't have one and hoped that he never would have such a thing.

And as for playing golf or tennis Mr. Darrow lit a cigarette and smiled contemptuously. He avowed he could see no real reason for a man admittedly young no longer tiring himself out on a golf course when he had a good light, an easy chair and an interesting book on science available.

Darrow added that he had never taken a great deal of exercise but had retained his health in spite of it, or perhaps—his eyes twinkled—"because of it."

Knickers? Yes-But Spare Us "Shorts" And Derbies

AL JOLSON IN "SHORTS" AT LOS ANGELES COUNTRY CLUB

Fall styles for men may be revolutionary to say the least and the least said the better for the sad part of it is that similar styles to the fall fashions in Scotland

may prevail in the United. States if rumors are to be believed.

Can you imagine—short coats flapping loosely from the shoulders, short, wide trousers flapping just as loosely several inches above the shoe tops, and derbies with low crowns and curving brims? These are the chic things for autumn street wear in Scotland.

It all sounds fairly reasonable except the hat. These things are what the well-dressed men may wear in Xenia this fall. But the hat. Derbies have not been able to stage much of a comeback in this country, and local merchants say that it seems hardly likely that they will this year.

Be that as it may, trouser bottoms hovering uncertainly above a three-inch expanse of sock, is another blow, which, it is hoped, will never fall.

Wide trousers, men agree, are all right, but they should be long as well as wide. The Englishman wears his trousers short anyway, but the American likes his trousers close to the ground. It is said they even pick out Americans on the Continent by this characteristic of their dress,—as well as by well known characteristics of other kinds.

These Scottish tailors, not quite satisfied with such predictions in regard to street clothes, go a step further and set what they think will be the mode in sport garb. "Shorts" will be the thing in trousers, and will reach half-way to the knee. The rest of the limb—or that portion below the knee—will be clad in fancy golf hose and heavy shoes. Instead of neckties, a colored scarf will be looped once in front and tucked into the shirt front.

"Yes", says the Xenia man at this final blow, "MAYBE it will be."

Men's fashions have always been less flexible than women's, and it is unlikely that the male will give up to these things without a struggle. Knickers were established in his favor only after a real battle. The wrist watch, the bright necktie, and the wide trouser had similar experiences.

A man seems curiously fond of sticking to his plain blues and greys in conservatively cut suits and letting the fads attack the feminine members of the family, or possibly it is because a man really has a secret passion for fancy raiment. which is only suppressed because of the conventions.

SYSTEM OF DISEASE PREVENTION SAVES ISLANDERS' HEALTH

By E. R. STITT
Surgeon General U. S. Navy
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute
(Written for United Press)

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—St. Thomas, one of the West Indies, is a small island thirty-three square miles in area, having a population of slightly over 10,000. Shortly after its purchase in 1917, officers of the Naval Medical Corps were placed in charge of its health administration and they immediately put into force a system of disease prevention.

Intestinal disease, as most directly affecting mortality rates, were attacked first. Proper sewage disposal was instituted; water supplies protected; food substances screened; places favoring the breeding of flies cleaned up, and typhoid vaccination made universal.

These undertakings were completed in 1918. Since that time there have been no cases of typhoid reported; and the general death rate for diseases of the alimentary tract which for the ten year period prior to our occupation amounted to 359 per 100,000 for the year 1919 was 61.

The mosquito-borne disease, malaria, dengue and filariasis, which also were causing much sickness, and economic disability, were combatted by eradicating the insect carrier, and—in the case of malaria—by treating the population so thoroughly that there should remain no reservoir of the disease for its propogation. These diseases continue to be a problem only in the more remote rural districts.

Smallpox has been extirpated by repeated vaccination. The spread of leprosy has been arrested by effective segregation in a colony where modern methods of treatment are employed. Yaws has been made rare through early sterilization of infected persons by arsphenamine; veneral infections, previously all but universal, have been curtailed; and, although at one time the streets, jails, and asylums were thronged with pellagrins, changing dietary habits of the people brought about the practical disappearance of pellagra in two years.

The infant mortality was appalling, one-third of all babies born dying within the year. A school for the training of native nurses to be instructors in hygiene among their people, maternity and baby clinics, visiting nurses and an annual baby-show combined, have reduced the former mortality 28 per cent—and the lowering is still progressing.

A "health record" of every individual has been opened. While the record was originally adopted to serve as a medical history, the collection has proved to be of inestimable value as a source of data for clinical and epidemiological studies. St. Thomas is unique in being the only political unit in the world having such a system.

The experiment here reported, although conducted on a tropical island, indicates that by the application in our country of measures that are practicable, inexpensive and not burdensome, we would be spared something over a quarter of a million deaths a year. What might be saved in ill-health, sickness and suffering and disability can only be surmised.

SALLIES OF FRENCH FASHION EXPERT IN NEW YORK AMAZING

New York is just now being edified by brilliant observations on American life from the pen of a noted French fashion expert, as gay and witty in their way as those of the heroine of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." And New York doesn't know just how to take it.

The new commentor is Marceline d'Alroy, authority on Parisian fashions. An article by her in October McClure's illustrates the kind of epigrams and comments that have set New York wondering about itself.:

"These successful American men may know how to make good but they certainly don't know how to make love."

"New York is a miracle. There are such crowds of good looking men in it. But I wish some would wear the mustache so that they do not look so all alike."

"Don't they know that some times a woman likes to seek for the lips beneath the mustache in the same way that men used to look for silk ankles beneath long skirts."

"The girdle is a moral support and garters help to keep the weak women straight."

"From lingerie to love is a very little step. But cheap lingerie suggests not a delicate deliberate step—merely a common slip."

"They say that beneath the skin all women are alike, but beneath our clothes we are all different."

"I have always felt that a man who wears a white tie in the day time is not to be trusted with a pretty woman."

NASH
Leads the World in Motor Car Value

The Simplest and Most Efficient 4 Wheel Brakes
Standard Equipment—No Extra Cost
Another vital Nash mechanical superiority is the special Nash 4-wheel brake system—the safest, simplest and most efficient type known to the industry.
They are of unique simplicity in design, having fewer points requiring lubrication than any other mechanical brake system.
The sixteen new Nash models now on display range in price from $865 to $2090 f. o. b. factory.

New Nash Features
7-bearing crankshaft motor—world's smoothest type—powers all new Nash models.
New-type crankcase "breather" which prevents crankcase dilution.
New double beam headlights with steering wheel control.
Rich new body finish colors.
All enclosed bodies are of the expensive wood frame body construction employed by finest American and European motor cars.
And a long list of added new improvements.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY AND HEARING FIXED

Thomas B. Lovett, 213 Montgomery St., Dayton, pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving a car while intoxicated before Probate Court Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday morning as the anti-climax of an auto collision on the Dayton and Xenia Pike at Zimmerman Saturday afternoon in which Mrs. Henry Norckauer, 136 Hill St., Xenia, sustained a triple fracture of the right arm and her daughter, Miss Dorothy, minor injuries.

Date for Lovett's hearing before Judge Wright was set for October 6. Bond was fixed at $500.

Mrs. Norckauer, besides the fractured arm, sustained lesser cuts and bruises, while her daughter, driver of the car, received a sprained wrist and knee, cuts and bruises. Lovett was also slightly hurt.

Lovett, driving a coupe toward Xenia, is blamed for the accident as it is alleged he caused a headon collision by traveling on the wrong side of the highway.

HOTEL PROPERTY TO BE SOLD BY SHERIFF

All furniture, fixtures, accessories, equipment and restaurant supplies of the Atlas Hotel, S. Detroit St., will be sold at sheriff's sale at the hotel, Friday, October 8, at 2 o'clock, following an order of Common Pleas Court in a legal action in which William H. Kane, is plaintiff, it is announced.

Walter Dorrien, owner and manager of the hotel, defendant in the action, announces that he will retain the ownership of the hostelry.

The hotel is closed temporarily while preparations for the sale are being made but Mr. Dorrien announces he will re-open the establishment in about ten days.

M'KINLEY P. T. A. TO CONDUCT DRIVE

Friday, October 1, was set aside as "McKinley School Day" when the president and membership committee of McKinley P. T. A. met at the school Monday afternoon and laid plans for a membership drive on that date.

A leader with two assistants was appointed in each room. The membership committee will work on honorary memberships on that date. A goal of 100 paid members was set by the membership chairman, Mrs. Richard McClellan. A membership fee of fifty cents is assessed.

WHAT DOES IT MORTAR?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—President Coolidge shook hands with 200 undertakers today, but he doesn't know it yet.

As the undertakers, or morticians, as they call themselves, entered the executive office the president turned to a secret service operative and asked:

"What defegation is this?"

The attache turned to Everett Sanders, the president's secretary.

"Morticians," Sanders said.

The Secret Service man thought this over and turning to the president, whispered.

"These are bricklayers, Mr. President."

VAUDEVILLE SHOW PLAYS OPERA HOUSE DURING THIS WEEK

Walter Harters vaudeville review, which includes the mirth-provoking Eddie Phillips in the cast, opened a week's engagement at the Opera House Monday night with a free performance.

Performances will be given every night at 8 p. m. Doors open at 7:30 o'clock.

Erma Harter, one of the leading performers, is acclaimed as a perfect gymnast. She is said to be a marvel in strength, is five feet three and one-half inches in height, weighs 135 pounds and possesses the strength of six average men.

Added to this accomplishment, she also sings, dances, is a wire-walker, a contortionist and a daring trapeze performer. M aH.sr-r ing trapeze performer. Mrs. Har-Walter, Jr., aged 9 and Jester, aged 7.

The sons are also billed as clever acrobats and gymnasts.

THOMAS C. JAMES DIES HERE MONDAY

Thomas C. James, 68, retired grocer and lifelong resident of Greene County, passed away at his home on E. Market St., Monday evening at 9:40 o'clock. Death followed an illness of two weeks, due to neuralgia of the heart. Mr. James had been failing in health for the past five months.

He was engaged in the grocery business for twenty-five years, retiring just recently, his two sons, Ralph and Byford taking over the business. Previous to entering the grocery business he traveled for nineteen years for Underwood-Calvary Confectioners, and J. K. McIntire, wholesale grocer, Dayton.

His wife preceded him in death seven years. He is survived by three sons and one daughter, Mrs. Andrew Grapevine, Omak, Wash.; Paul, at Yellow Springs; Ralph and Byford of Xenia. Four sisters and two brothers also survive: Mrs. Sam Carey, the Misses Jennie and Lorena James and Morris James, at Wilmington; Mrs. Lewis Buell, Xenia, and Enoch James, Dayton.

Mr. James was a member of the First Reformed Church, Xenia. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Reformed Church. Friends may call at the home of Ralph and Byford James, Fairground Road, Wednesday evening.

Individuality and Memorials

Where is the man who would design his new home exactly like that of his neighbor next door?
Who will purchase a suit of the same color and style being worn by a friend?
Isn't it true that nearly everyone has a natural instinct for individuality? This is reflected in every home and about the person of those with discriminating taste. Then why erect a Memorial that is commonplace? Why "copy" that which has already been erected by someone else? Most assuredly you will better appreciate your Memorial or even a Marker if it is not commonplace.

Our designing service has this thought uppermost at all times and is continually creating original designs. Our display, the largest in Ohio, is made up of beautiful creations of Art that are individual. Consult us and we will help you plan something that will be the most fitting for your Cemetery lot.

HAT TO MATCH EVERY NECKTIE IS STYLE DICTATE TO XENIA MEN THIS AUTUMN

The average well-dressed Englishman is reputed to possess eleven pairs of shoes.

The well-dressed Xenian will soon find himself forced to have as many soft hats, if the fad for colored felts takes.

For it is obvious, local merchants say, that a brown suit and a lavender hat become no man; nor would one of those fawn colored with more than a dash of orange, make a pleasant combination with an oxford gray topcoat.

Therefore, for that reason it will probably eventuate that only the wealthy and venturesome will indulge themselves in this well-meaning appreciation of colors.

It has long been admitted that there is little enough color in the sombre garments of the male—except of course, for neckties, and socks, and more recently, shirts—but it is extremely doubtful that men will endorse the varied colors in headgear, according to the concensus of opinion.

This fall, it is indicated in displays, the older man need not consider investing in anything but the gray fedoras or derby, or else he must be extremely young looking for his age to follow the dictates of fashion for youths.

Merchants argue that the college student may be dashing but he can never attain to the distinguished appearance of an older man correctly garbed in gray or dark blue.

The younger men this fall will sport about in outlandish stripes or spots.

Fashions this fall in clothes are slowly coming around to the more conservative type as displays of suits in Xenia lean toward the gray colors and mixtures of the different shades of brown once more.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, smiled broadly after a visit to President Coolidge. Perhaps—

STUDEBAKER PRICE CUT MADE POSSIBLE BY IMMENSE SALES

Price cuts on Studebaker Cars, effective September 27, ranging from $35 to $205, have been announced by A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation of America. Models affected and amount of reduction on each are: Big Six Club Coupe, $205; Big Six Custom Brougham, $200; Standard Six Sport Roadster, $80; and Standard Six Country Club Coupe, $35.

In making the announcement, President Erskine pointed out that the prices established in July on the Custom Sedans were made in anticipation of an increased volume of sales. The response has more than met expectations, according to Mr. Erskine, for sales on Sedans since August 1, 1926, have been more than double the best previous similar period. Compared with the same period of 1925 sales have been four times greater.

The $200 reduction on the Big Six Custom Brougham brings this car down to $1785, the lowest price ever placed on a Big Six four-door enclosed car. According to President Erskine, the cut in the price of this model, as with others reduced, is made in order to give purchasers, immediately, the benefit of economies which will result from increased production.

More than double the number of Studebaker Sedans were sold during the first thirty days of the Custom Sedan display than in any previous month in Studebaker history, according to a report received from the factory by The Greene County Hardware Co., local dealers.

CANCER CAUSE IS STILL UNKNOWN

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 28—Exact knowledge as to the cause of cancer is still being sought without results according to the most distinguished cancer research authorities of the world.

Dr. Archibald Leitch of London spoke at the Hopkins University today on "Cancer and chronic irritation." He expressed the view that some elements in addition to chronic irritation was necessary to the production of cancer.

He suggested that this additional element might be purely chemical and not an organism. He discussed cancers found among the workers in certain industries.

Dr. Ferdinand Blumenthal, professor of medicine at the University of Berlin advanced the theory that some forms of cancer are caused by parasitic organisms.

HURRICANE SURVIVORS WRITE INTERESTINGLY OF RESULTS

Graphic accounts of the hurricane that spelled destruction in Florida, are included in letters received by relatives from John and E. S. Davidson, former Xenians, who are located at Miami and West Palm Beach, respectively.

John Davidson's letter says: "This is just a word to prove that we're still here and unhurt. We had to get out of the house in the dark, going out to the garage where we sat in the car. We wired the garage doors to the car and so kept them from blowing off. We sat there until about noon the next day and thanked God we were alive. The dead are still being found buried in kelp and debris. I think many were lost trying to escape from their houses during the lull which was the dead centre of the hurricane. The worst followed that lull. Our house, I believe, stood upon the only strip of the island that was not under water and it, the water, was just in front of us, at the edge of the yard and at our rear.

"Just now we are without city water. Sea water from the bay is pumped into the mains for fire protection and sewage use and it smells to heaven. Thus far we have been able to buy distilled water but it is more and more difficult to get and we are making preparations to catch rainwater. None of us have had a bath, except from a basin. Water is too precious. But I think we'll try the ocean just to get wet, although the dead are still being found along shore. The children and I ran into one that was just being taken out of the kelp yesterday—not so pleasant.

"Have fixed one corner of the house to live in,—off from the part where the roof is gone—in the "tower" section.

"Otherwise we are all right. Enough food and some ice. Large ships have been set up—or over on shore. A big barge is located (not crosswise, fortunately) in the center of the Venetian causeway between us and the mainland. Smaller boats, like tugs, fishing boats and the like are washed across streets and into buildings. Mike was at the Wofford Hotel when coping fell through the skylight, killing a man four or five feet away. Fortunately, he had a supply of cash and he and his car have mighty near, or quite, saved our lives—for we are far out from supply sources and it was our refuge in the storm."

E. S. Davidson's letter says in part: * * * "Hollywood, Miami, Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale are a wreck. I think it safe to say the there isn't a building of any description that didn't suffer some loss. The streets and sidewalks are covered four and five feet deep with sand and debris of every kind and description. Some of the most beautiful and costly homes are crumbled like an egg shell. West Palm Beach is taking care of hundreds of refuges, and everybody is sewing and doing his bit to help relieve their suffering. Typhoid is breaking out in some of the towns and they say the stench is awful. Waves and wind picked up cement sidewalks and broke the paved streets and tossed the broken pieces about like bits of paper. Our loss is very small."

The first session will be held Wednesday, starting at 9 a. m., with meeting of the state board of managers at the Hotel Lafayette. After the registration and reception of delegates and officers, exhibits, pageants, motion pictures, banquets and addresses will attract the delegates.

Welcoming addresses will be made by Hon. J. W. Gray, mayor of Marietta; B. P. Skinner, superintendent of Marietta schools and Mrs. Frank Mautz, president, Marietta P. T. A., Mrs. C. E. Kendel, state president, will respond and give the membership banner.

Business sessions will begin Thursday, with reports from various departments. Professor J. E. Turner, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston will speak on "Health Education" in the evening and other important addresses will be made. Conclusion of reports and elections of officers will take place Friday. Luncheons and banquets will intersperse the program and an auto drive around historic Marietta followed by a tea at the home of Mrs. Edwin B. Strecker, Harmar Hill, will feature the convention.

Convention headquarters will be at the First Congregational Church.

REGISTRATION LOW

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28—Registration at Ohio University today was 5,944, which was slightly lower than the total for the same period in 1925. However, when enrollment has been completed, it is thought the total will be over the 9,000 mark.

STAR DEALER TELLS ABOUT TIRE SAVING BY CAREFUL DRIVING

The tire bill is one of the heaviest tolls to which the automobile owner is subjected.

Tire life may be lengthened and the tire bill materially reduced by the observance of certain simple precautions involving little labor.

The importance of tire conservation has been made an important economic issue by the increased price for raw rubber.

Some hints for tire conservation given by Fred Johnston, local Star dealer follow:

Drive carefully around corners. Speeding on turns causes skids that wear spots in tires, and weaken the side walls—especially of balloon tires.

Keep the garage floor free from oil and grease and wipe off any that gets on the tires.

When the rear tires show evidence of wear, change them to the front wheels. A worn tire ordinarily will last many times as long on the front wheel. A worn as it will on the rear wheel.

Drive carefully over rough spots. Stone bruises result from careless driving over uneven surfaces and stone bruises destroy tires.

Drive at moderate speeds. Fast driving heats tires and heated tires wear quickly.

Above all things, keep your tires inflated to the pressure recommended by the manufacturer. Underinflation is most destructive to tires.

Inspect tires at least once a week. A tire gauge that indicates air pressure is the wisest investment an automobile owner can

MAJOR TO SPEAK

Major Robbins, Commandant, Wright Field, will address Xenia Kiwanians at the Elks' Club, Tuesday evening.

Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock. A large attendance of members is being urged.

LABOR PLEASED BY FIVE-DAY WEEK PLAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—The new five day week policy instituted by Henry Ford is considered by the American Federation of Labor as another victory in its effort to reduce the hours of labor, William Green, president of the Labor organization said today.

Green said Ford's new policy would have a "moral effect" on other large industries but he refused to predict that it would result in a general slashing in working hours.

BETTER HOMES

Greatest Force In the Moulding of Character

During the plastic age of childhood no other force is as strong as home influence. Very few there are who can live down their home surroundings. Children respond to the subtle influence of a well furnished home. If then, for no other reason than the benefit to your offspring, secure a well furnished home and let them enjoy the manifold benefits.
